Old San Francisco Impossible, But Done
The King's Open Car
Will England Fight?

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1935, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.

San Francisco, Aug. 29—San Francisco, as old in the minds of Americans, as the word "California" itself, is cheerful. The great bridge that will unite San Francisco to Oakland across the bay is progressing rapidly. And the suspension bridge is already stretching its spider web cables across the Golden Gate, where the Pacific Ocean comes rushing into the bay.

Thanks to good management, and an excellent engineer, Mr. Strauss, this Golden Gate bridge with its magnificent span of more than 4000 feet, will be finished on time and for less than the $35,000,000 guaranteed as maximum price.

When the Golden Gate bridge was first suggested, a law suit was brought to stop the project on the grounds that it was not possible to build a safe suspension span exceeding eighteen hundred feet in length. On the theory that "impossible" does not apply to San Francisco, work is progressing with the 4000 foot span.

One hundred years ago this coming October, San Francisco started, and the city means to celebrate its beginning as a baby metropolis, known at first as Yerba Buena. The hundredth anniversary celebration will include a reproduction of the 1835 to 1869 period, including impersonations of some that loved her. General Fremont, Edwin Booth the great actor, Lotta Crabtree, Mark Twain and Bret Harte.

San Francisco will wait until 1938, the completion of Oakland Bay bridge, and Golden Gate bridge, to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary with a fine exposition. Meanwhile, go to San Diego and see the exposition open there now.

San Francisco institutions are taking on the respectable qualities of maturity. The San Francisco Examiner, for years the great power in public opinion on this coast and one of the most important newspapers of the United States, continues to gain in circulation and influence. William Randolph Hearst took charge of it when he left Harvard in 1887, and began at once exposing graft in the City Hall, demanding new schools and public improvements, sending his special trains to Sacramento, San Jose and other points to deliver the paper.

When young W. R. Hearst told his father, Senator George Hearst, that he wanted to run the Examiner, the father is supposed to have said "certainly you can have the Examiner, Willie, but what BUSINESS do you want to go into?"

Senator Hearst would be surprised to know how much of a business grew from that small San Francisco Examiner, in the way of newspapers all over the country, and many magazines, a business much greater in every way than all of Senator Hearst's mining operations, although that included the Homestake and the Anaconda mines.

The sad death of the Queen of Belgium proves that the open car is the dangerous car. The queen was thrown from the car, struck her head against a tree, and was instantly killed. Had she been in a closed car, she could not have been thrown violently, and probably would have escaped death as did her husband, who was holding the wheel.

The open car is the ideal car to see the country and the sky, but a dangerous car for those who drive too fast.

England wants no war, with prosperity returning and the spoils of the big war not yet digested. But the wing feathers of the peace angel must tremble at sight of British and Italian fleets in the Mediterranean, near the mouth of the Suez Canal.

If Britain tries to close that canal to Italy, leaving thousands of Italian soldiers cut off from their base and from food supplies, there will probably be some heavy gunfire.

It seems unlikely that devotion to Ethiopia, even though her government be a member of the League of Nations, could persuade the British to force war at this moment.

With Mussolini it is otherwise. He is irrevocably committed to his Ethiopian policy, and would be destroyed, his prestige and his dictatorship, perhaps, wiped out if he should yield.

England, earth's greatest collector of other people's territory, cannot reasonably object to Mussolini entering Ethiopia, taking an old and efficient civilization to a country that since the days of King Solomon has not been able to achieve civilization for itself.

Ethiopia is two thousand years behind the times, Mussolini will improve on that, and Great Britain if wise, will not interfere.

BOLZANO, ITALY—Italian troops put under first test of shell fire.

Paris, Aug. 30—Le Matin today reported 60 Italian submarines have been ordered held in readiness for maneuvers near their base in southern Sicily.

In a dispatch from Bolzano, Italy, the newspaper reported evidences of an important concentration of air force also along the Sicilian coast.

In informed Paris quarters these developments were regarded as a reply to the dispatch of British warships to the Suez canal.

Bolzano, Italy, Aug. 30—Italian troops today received their first "baptism of shell fire."

On the Austrian frontier artillery and machine guns poured shells and bullets in a barrage over the heads of thousands of advancing infantry.

The deadly missiles were substituted for harmless explosives by leaders who reasoned that real artillery fire was designed to eliminate the panic into which soldiers fall when first they hear the shells of their own guns whistling over them.

Hultman Hearing Off Till Wednesday

Just when things were beginning to get warm, the Governor's Council voted today to postpone until Wednesday, at 11 a. m., what virtually amounts to ouster proceedings against Eugene C. Hultman.

The matter being threshed out is what Governor Curley calls illegalities in the Metropolitan Water Commission's sanctioning of two payments in connection with the $65,000,000 Ware River project.

Hultman, former Boston police commissioner, is chairman of the commission.

In a closed session, yesterday, Hultman and Councillor Daniel H. Coakley were reported to have resorted to fisticuffs. Coakley described the brief flurry as fistic, but Hultman said it was merely a matter of "pushing around."

When Coakley arrived today, he was handed several letters and telegrams.

One telegram was purportedly from the "Madison Square Garden Corporation," and it offered Coakley his own figures for a battle with Joe Louis, Detroit bomber.

Coakley laughed when asked whom he desired as referee. Just then Hultman entered the room.

"I won't need any referee," said Coakley, "unless I'm pushed around."

Governor Curley had arrived shortly before noon at his office, but had other business before meeting with the council.

No reason was given for the adjournment. The only session has been private.

Leslie Douty of Green Hill shot a brilliant medal 71, below par, in beating little Johnny Waloshyn of Walpole, 2 and 1. Waloshyn had a medal 76.

BELGIANS SOB AT BIER OF QUEEN

By Associated Press

Brussels, Aug. 30—To the muffled roll of drums and the shrill notes of bugles sounding "aux champs" (last post), the dead Queen Astrid made her tragic homecoming today to the country which had grown to love her.

Banked with white flowers and lighted by six large candles, the simple coffin was placed in the palace chapel.

The special train that bore the body from Switzerland as it drew into the downtown Gare Du Nord station at 8:40 a. m., (2:40 Eastern Standard Time) found a city in deep mourning.

Sorrowing crowds wept openly in the streets and behind them doors were draped with black crepe and shop windows were shuttered.

A deathlike hush fell over the crowd outside the station as the Queen's body was lifted from the coach in which it made the overnight journey from Lucerne.

Sobs from the bareheaded crowd broke the deep silence as attendants placed the casket in the motor hearse outside the somberly draped station and stepped back to await the start of the drive to the palace.

Then drums, hung with heavy black velvet, began the funeral roll, and the notes from the trumpets of a band of army buglers rang out

Man, 114, Rallies Refuses to 'Rust'

By International News Service

St. Paul, Neb., Aug. 30—To the amazement of physicians, Solomon Rickner, 114 years old, was definitely recovering from a serious illness today. Last week he was reported dying.

Lying comfortably on his hospital bed, the aged man, who was "too old" to enlist in the Civil War, today gave a rude formula for longevity, an indictment of modern social customs.

"Man is growing wiser, but weaker," he declared. "Soft foods and irregularity are shortening men's lives where scientific sanitation and disease control are lengthening them.

"For my part, I would rather have my bones wear out than rust out."

Rickner's formula for long life calls for regularity in sleeping and eating, coarse foods, exercise, fresh air, and temperance.

He likes his pipe, his beer, and his whiskey, but he has always been temperate.

Astrid's Three Motherless Children

PRINCE BAUDOIN — PRINCE ALBERT — PRINCESS JOSEPHINE

Eight-year-old Princess Josephine of Belgium understands that Queen Astrid isn't going to tuck her and four-year-old Prince Baudoin and eighteen-months-old Prince Albert in their beds any more. When her father, still suffering from the injuries he received in the crash that took the Queen's life, told his children of her death—only Josephine knew what had happened. She was also able to feel grief over the death of King Albert a year ago. The other children are not old enough to be affected by the tragedy.

The search extended to the Rockland line on one side of the town and to the Abington line on the other.

Connor's disappearance was reported today to police by his wife. He is the father of five children and lives in Whiting park, South Weymouth.

3500 Storm ERA Offices for Pay

More than 2000 ERA workers stormed the Albany street city yards today demanding their pay.

An additional 1500 men clamored about the disbursing office at Shawmut avenue and Brookline street, also asking to be paid.

The workers were supposed to have been paid yesterday, but through some slip-up payrolls were not forthcoming.

A worker mounted a truck in the Albany street yards and made a speech demanding removal of Thomas Sullivan, Boston ERA administrator.

The speaker was removed from the truck and taken into the office of General Foreman Thomas O'Connell. He was released after a few minutes, but made no further speeches.

ALLEN PLANE FALLS AFTER FIRST MILE

By Associated Press

Union Air Terminal, Burbank, Cal., Aug. 30—Death claimed Cecil Allen today as he followed eight other planes roaring toward Cleveland and New York in the annual $12,500 Bendix Trophy race.

Allen, 33-year-old former trans-Pacific flier, was killed when his Gee Bee plane crashed a mile from the terminal.

Meanwhile, the eight other fliers, including such prominent aviation figures as Amelia Earhart and Col. Roscoe Turner, sped eastward, unaware of the tragedy.

TRIED PACIFIC HOP

Allen's craft grounded in a field in north Hollywood, plowing a deep furrow before it was demolished and its wreckage scattered for 500 feet.

Allen first flew to fame when he and Don Moyle attempted a non-stop flight across the Pacific in 1931.

Battling storms and fuel shortage, they took a month to fly from Japan to Tacoma, after being forced down on a bleak Aleutian island and then flying to the Siberian coast for paint thinner, which they used as fuel.

Today's flight was his first experience in a transcontinental speed dash.

His ship, the "Spirit of Right," was sponsored by a religious group.

Two witnesses of the crash, Fred and Glenn Van Winkle said the ship flew over a power line. A wing was dipping and Allen shut off the motor.

BODY MANGLED

The pilot, jammed between the motor and fuselage, was badly mangled.

Allen was last to take off. The others, with official eastern daylight starting times, were:

Amelia Earhart, 4:53 a. m. (Not competing).
Roy O. Hunt, 6 a. m.
Benjamin O. Howard, 6:07 a. m.
Royal Leonard, 7:40 a. m.
Roscoe Turner, 7:50 a. m.
Russell Thaw, 8 a. m.
Earl Ortman, 8:10 a. m.
Jacqueline Cochrane, 8:20 a. m.

Miss Cochrane quit at Kingman, Ariz., when her radio gave out.

Howard cleared from Kansas City at 12:53 p. m. (EDT).

Miss Earhart, Colonel Turner and Ortman were reported past Albuquerque. Ortman was lost for an hour. Leonard was sighted over Winslow, Ariz.

Thaw and Hunt were unreported.

Rain Obscures Goal of Fliers

Municipal Airport, Cleveland, O., Aug. 30—Death and a chilling downpour of rain joined hands today to set a sombre opening schedure of the 1935 national air races.

Under the huge wooden stands which held only a handful of drenched spectators, that part of the aviation coterie which had arrived to participate in the four-day meet discussed the tragic end of Cecil Allen in the Bendix race takeoff.

A lowering leaden sky, with a stinging drizzle, brought from race officials the prediction the racing pilots might be unable to locate the local airport.

Little Donald has been a patient at the hospital since August 22.

SOBBING CROWDS VIEW BODY IN PALACE

strangely and sharply in the usually bustling square facing the station.

The funeral will be next Tuesday.

King Leopold left the train at Gare Du Luxembourg, before it arrived at the downtown station, and drove to the palace in an automobile to await his queen's body.

TROOPS LINE STREETS

Governmental and city dignitaries rode in six automobiles which moved behind the hearse as the sad procession to the palace began.

Troops lined each side of the street as the cortege wound its way slowly up Boulevarde du Jardin Botanique and turned into Rue Royale, which led straight to the gates of the palace.

Church bells tolled throughout the city.

Hundreds of persons who packed the sidewalks, crossed themselves and whispered softly-worded prayers as the body of the Queen in a coffin covered with a wreath of roses passed along.

Tiny children clutched mothers' hands watching the mournful drama.

Queen Astrid's two older children were told their mother was dead. King Leopold broke the news. The third child is a baby 14 months old.

KING BINDS OWN HURTS

King Leopold was sad-eyed and fatigued from a troubled day and a sleepless night.

Before he left the train accompanied by his secretary, Baron Capelle, he bandaged his own injuries.

In the palace as he awaited the arrival of the cortege he sat with bowed head, surrounded by his favorite court officials.

The funeral party halted briefly outside the palace, then the coffin was carried up the grand staircase to the flower-banked Chapelle Ardente on the floor which only a few days before rang with the happy laughter of the 29-year-old mother and her three children.

Thousands crowded outside the palace gates, waiting for the hoped-for word that they soon would be allowed to make their slow way to the chapel to pay their last respects to their beloved queen.

WHERE KING ALBERT LAYS

The grief of the huge crowd was doubly the greater because the chapel where Queen Astrid's body was tenderly placed was where King Albert, victim of another accident, lay in state less than 18 months ago.

Black hangings covered the walls of the tiny chapel and white dahlias and roses, among Queen Astrid's favorite flowers, banked the coffin right and left.

For a short time, while some court officials and a few others were admitted to the chapel, King Leopold waited in another room of the palace.

Then when the others had gone he entered the room alone and knelt beside the bier.

Unlike the dripping skies, fog and mist of February which prevailed at King Albert's obsequies, a bright late summer sun bathed Brussels for the homecoming of Queen Astrid.

The early morning's slightly clouded sky cleared as the funeral train arrived.

SUN LIGHTS SCENE

As the doors of the train opened, the sun broke through.

Premier Paul Van Zeeland, pale and visibly moved, and other ministers accompanied the funeral train from Arlon, France.

The crowd outside the palace sympathetically noted the distress of Leopold while he stood on the portico.

His right cheek, covered with adhesive plaster, his right arm bandaged and his lower lip slightly cut, the monarch still plainly showed evidence of nervous shock and physical and mental anguish.

Prince Charles, Leopold's brother, was absent from Brussels. Queen Mother Elizabeth, and the king's sister, Marie Jose, crown princess of Italy, were expected from Naples today.

After the king had remained for several minutes praying and sobbing quietly beside the bier he retired, and cabinet members and persons of the court were admitted.

PEOPLE ARE ADMITTED

At mid-day the crowd outside the palace was permitted to file through the chapel.

On the way to the palace, the cortege passed the monument to the unknown soldier. There, groups of veterans, carrying regimental banners, were gathered.

Cardinal Van Roey, the archbishop of Malines, and other church dignitaries awaited the arrival of the body at the palace. They conducted a short religious service before the coffin was carried upstairs.

The minister of education issued special orders for services of respect to the Queen upon the reopening of the schools.

School children will be lined up in each classroom before a picture of Astrid, flowers will be laid beside the picture and a minute of silence will be observed.

Teachers were instructed to explain to their charges that the queen left three young children who must always be held in deep respect by the rest of the nation's children.

Five men who spent two days riding the back of a tropical hurricane were rescued from the floundering auxiliary yacht La Dahama of Philadelphia, by the lifeboat crew of the Italian liner Rex. The men are shown being transferred to the trans-Atlantic liner after the thrilling mid-sea rescue which was witnessed by hundreds of passengers from the deck of the ship. The passengers cheered the Rex's lifeboat crew who rescued the seamen in the heavy seas.

WIFE SEES TWO MEN BATTLE IN DARK

Harwich, Aug. 30.—Details of an early morning battle on a lonely road, between an irate husband and an enemy in the presence of the former's wife, were recited by police today with the arrest of both men.

Byron Oliver, 51, former Harwich police officer, was charged with attempted murder of Arthur Kelley, 45, of Belmont road, West Warwich.

Police said he had whipped out a revolver when Kelley pounced upon him.

Kelley, on Oliver's complaint, was charged with assault and battery with a flash light.

In district court, both men pleaded not guilty.

According to the police, Kelley hid in a hedge near his home early this morning, awaiting the homecoming of his wife.

When she allegedly appeared wih the former police officer, Kelley surprised him and a fight ensued. During the altercation Oliver is alleged to have whipped out a .32 caliber revolver which was discharged as the irate husband attempted to seize it.

Last October a load of buckshot was fired through Olier's bedroom in the night, slightly injuring him. No action on that score was started by police, however.

BICYCLE OF THE AIR

Man Flies by Own Muscle Power

Frankfurt-on-Main, Germany, Aug. 30—What was claimed to be the first flight of a man by the power of his own muscles succeeded today at the Redstock Airdrome.

A local flier named Duennbell flew an airplane with its propeller driven by muscle power.

The airplane, at an altitude of three feet, was recorded as covering a distance of about 600 feet on the first attempt and about 725 feet on a second flight.

The flier piloted a highwing machine fitted with treadles which turned the propeller.

Duennbell was attempting to win a prize of 5000 marks ($2000) offered by the Frankfurt Polytechnic Society for the first human muscular power flight of 500 meters and around two pylons.

Prince of Wales Wanted Astrid "Or Nobody Else"

Following is an intimate appreciation of the beloved Queen Astrid of Belgium, whose tragic death came in an automobile accident, written by W. A. S. Douglas who as an American correspondent in Europe "covered" the civil and religious ceremonies which united the then Princess Astrid of Sweden to the future King of Belgium.

By W. A. S. DOUGLAS

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Chicago, Aug. 30—Europe's loveliest princess!

So once remarked the Prince of Wales—a judge if ever there was one.

History's most beautiful queen!

The words came in personal compliment and from a most unlooked-for source from another queen who in her youth had been very beautiful, Marie of Roumania.

The world loved Astrid of Sweden—Astrid of the snows—as the Belgians came to call the Scandinavian princess, for her beauty, her kindness, her generosity, her independence, her simplicity.

Chief among her one-time suitors was that confirmed bachelor, the Prince of Wales. He was reported to have once told his mother, Queen Mary, that "if it can't be Astrid it will be nobody."

Dread of hemophilia, the curse of royal-inbreeding throughout Europe, is said to have blocked the match. Astrid and Wales were cousins.

The same fear barred another who offered his heart and hand—Henry Duke of Gloucester, King George's third son.

Astrid also refused Olof of Norway and is said to have rejected the handsome Humbert, Crown Prince of Italy, who later married Marie Jose of Belgium, Astrid's sister-in-law.

The Princess of the Snows met the son of Belgium's King three years after the World War.

The slim gallant youth, then Duke of Brabant, who had fought as a private soldier in the trenches, went to Sweden on vacation and at first meeting fell in love with King Oscar's loveliest niece.

Following the civil ceremony in Stockholm, November 10, 1926, Astrid went to Brussels to be wed again with the pomp of church.

Arriving, she ran laughingly into her bridegroom's arms, kissed him again and again—and cried. All Belgium stared. Real love among the mighty? Impossible!

Strange but true! Belgium came to love Astrid as did Leopold. She brought him a boy heir, another boy and a girl. And she insisted on pushing her babies around in carriages like any housewife.

Mystery War Ray Hinted in Astrid Death

By International News Service

London, Aug. 30—The startling possibility that the recent series of fatal automobile accidents in continental Europe, one of which caused the death of Queen Astrid of Belgium, may have been due to secret mysterious rays being experimented with for war-time use was hinted in an Ostend dispatch distributed by Reuter's Agency today.

The dispatch said the possibility was being discussed by Belgians there. The recent death of the wife of Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria in an automobile crash was mentioned, together with the accident in which Vice-Chancellor Emil Fey narrowly escaped. Both these accidents occurred on Austrian soil. As in the case of Queen Astrid, drivers lost control of cars.

In distributing the Ostend dispatch, Reuter announced the report was not for publication in London.

Reports have been current for months that various European military experts have been experimenting with secret rays, chiefly for anti-aircraft defenses. They are said to have the power of stopping motor engines by crippling the magneto or other electrical parts.

Some time ago, the European press was filled with reports of automobilists traveling on various roads finding their motors suddenly stalled without apparent reason.

including Italo Balbo, Italy's "forgotten hero," attended the exercises.

Mussolini stood with Constanza Ciano, father of Il Duce's son-in-law, Galeazzo Ciano, minister of propaganda, who has left for volunteer service in East Africa.

Political circles were much interested in the tone Mussolini will adopt in a speech today in his final review of the troops.

Much, they said, depends upon the reaction his extraordinary cabinet declaration is receiving in the other capitals of Europe, particularly London.

If London's impression is favorable, it is said, Mussolini's speech will be most conciliatory.

Informed circles said, however, they considered it inevitable that Great Britain would stick to its idea of strongly opposing before the League of Nations council Italy's contentions in Ethiopia.

Such being the case, it was thought very possible that Mussolini would warn London to head off the British opposition on the ground that interference would mean serious trouble.

British Home Fleet Called Early for "Drill"

By Associated Press

London, Aug. 30—The British home fleet began to assemble at Portland today for its scheduled fall maneuvers as the bulk of the Mediterranean fleet moved from its base at the Island of Malta to strategic stations near the Suez Canal.

The assembly at Portland is one week earlier than originally planned. It brings the home fleet in readiness to move to any station in case of necessity.

Without stating the reason, the admiralty ordered aircraft-carrier Courageous, which was scheduled to dock for a refitting, to join the fleet for maneuvers.

The Courageous already is taking on planes at Portsmouth.

This action follows the cancellation of leaves by the Royal Air force officers and men in Portsmouth and vicinity.

Admiral Sir Roger Backhouse has just taken command of the home fleet from Admiral the Earl of Cork.

The official reason given for assembling the fleet earlier than planned is that it gives the new commander an opportunity of inspecting his ships.

Unless there is some other change in program, the home fleet will leave for a cruise in Scotch waters in September.

When the cruise ends in mid November, the battle cruiser Hood and some other units of the home fleet are to be transferred to the Mediterranean, replacing older battleships now there.

From Portland, one of the points on the English mainland closest to Gibraltar, crack warships should reach Malta in three or four days under forced draft.

The aircraft-carriers Glorious and Furious are already in the Mediterranean.

Ethiopia Takes Over Railroads to Move Army

By Associated Press

Addis Ababa, Aug. 30—The Ethiopian government today stopped all railroad transportation of Merchants' goods in order that the army may utilize all railroad facilities for the movement of soldiers, munitions and foodstuffs.

The British, French and Greek legations here were understood to have issued assurances today that there was no need for panic and to have promised to give at least a fortnight's warning in event of danger of Italian invasion.

The legations were believed to have acted in an effort to prevent their nationals, particularly business men, from leaving precipitately.

The French authorities added that Italy would not begin war without notification to Great Britain and France.

Although the British, French and German ministers have decided to evacuate their remaining nationals only in the event of the greatest peril, they pushed ahead their work for the protection of their own legations.

The Germans are constructing a bomb-proof dugout on the river near the legation capable of accommodating 150 persons.

German Minister Kirch Holtes, who distinguished himself as an officer in the World War, is laying in emergency foodstuffs, medicine, beds and other supplies.

The Germans have 250 nationals here and 100 proteges. The French have only 20 citizens. The British have 25 in addition to 3000 Hindus, Egyptians and other colonials.

Laval to Decide Paris Move on 'War'

Paris, Aug. 30—Premier Laval went into seclusion today to decide whether France would support Italy or Great Britain.

The premier, with only three days before he will meet Anthony Eden, British minister for league affairs, must decide who will get the French support at Geneva September 4.

Laval had a final talk with Vittorio Cerrutti, Italian ambassador to Paris. Officials said the Italian ambassador advised the premier "Mussolini won't budge."

Phillips Air Hunt Halted by Fog

Hopes for the safety of Donald K. Phillips, 23, wealthy New York aviator, diminished today.

Coast Guard airplanes from Salem, New London and Cape May, engaged in the search of New England coastlines, were grounded because of fog.

Phillips left Roosevelt Field, Long Island, Wednesday, to fly to Providence and visit his parents.

He was last seen flying over the Southampton, N. Y., airport a short time after he took off.

Phillips is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank N. Phillips of Butler avenue, Providence. The elder Mr. Phillips is president of the Washburn Wire Company, of Phillipsdale, R. I., and New York.

FLOWERS FOR QUINS! WHAT! BOY FRIENDS SO SOON?

"Now, I Wonder What This Can Be"

With the intent look of a botanist, Quin Yvonne very interestedly examines a pretty flower.

What makes Quin Yvonne so happy in the center picture? Can it be her new bouquet of flowers? Maybe it's her straw hat that tickles her so.

Some Joke, 'Eh, Yvonne

Quin Cecile seems to have temporarily lost her jovial mood, and is taking a keen interest in one of her visitors. The attention to flowers for the moment has been suspended. Maybe somebody else — perhaps one of the sisters— has a larger bunch of floral beauties.

MISS COLBERT GETS DIVORCE IN MEXICO

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Hollywood, Aug. 30—Quietly and without any publicity, Claudette Colbert, world famous motion picture star, had obtained a divorce from Norman Foster today.

The decree was granted Miss Colbert in Mexico after the actress' lawyer had pleaded her case.

Foster is now free to wed Sally Blane, of whom he announced his marriage plans some months ago.

Miss Colbert said today that she has no immediate marriage plans for herself, but that she wishes Foster and Miss Blane all the happiness in the world.

While Claudette and Norman have been separated for over a year and any talk of divorce has always been denied, it has been rumored in Hollywood for some months that a divorce would be sought by her, either in Mexico or Reno.

The elopement of Miss Colbert, under her real name of Lily Chausins, and Foster took place in 1927 when both were members of the same theatrical company playing in New York.

Four years ago they came to Hollywood, brought here by the movies, and since that time Claudette has become world famous.

She won the Academy prize last year for the best performance given on the screen and today there is no actress in motion pictures more sought after by the various film producers.

Norman, too, has been successful as a popular young juvenile. Their separation, each has explained, was a matter of incompatibility and due to each outgrowing the other.

The wedding of Miss Blane and Foster will take place shortly. The two have been madly in love ever since they met and have made no secret of their romance.

"Now, if I Could Only Reach That Vase!"

Here, Quin Cecile does a bit of acting. Although there are no flowers in sight, save the ones delicately laid in her pretty summer dress, she'd have you believe she was reaching for some more. Then, too, she may be reaching for a flower vase.

DUKE'S FIANCEE TELLS

King's Son Proposed 3 Weeks Ago

By International News Service

Dumfries, Scotland, Aug. 30—Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott, whose engagement to the Duke of Gloucester was anounced last night, disclosed today that the third son of King George and Queen Mary proposed to her three weeks ago.

In an interview with International News Service, Lady Alice, daughter of the Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry, also revealed that the announcement of her engagement came as a complete surprise to dinner guests at the family castle.

The surprise, she said, was arranged by having the engagement announcement broadcast by radio while the guests were at dinner. A portable radio set had been secreted near the dinner table.

Lady Alice, in a tweed costume and brilliant silk muffler, was interviewed on the terrace of Drumlanrig castle. She said:

"I am very, very happy. The engagement seems to have taken everyone by surprise. It was known only by our families.

"We have been friends for a long time, but I am afraid the details of our romance must always remain secret except that the Duke proposed to me three weeks ago and I accepted him."

She laughed as she described the expressions of astonishment on the faces of the guests when they heard the announcement.

'LITTLE EAGLET' BUT NOT LINDY'S

SCRIBE SEES BRUNO ALIBI BOY

New York, Aug. 30—A "mystery boy," living on Long Island, declared by counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann to be Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., is not the Lindbergh child, a copyrighted story in the Daily Mirror declared today.

Fisher announced in Los Angeles he would demand a new trial for Hauptmann, convicted kidnaper, on the ground that Baby Lindbergh is still alive.

The body of the baby found near the Lindbergh home in the Sourland Mountain foothills, Fisher said, was not that of the kidnaped child.

NOT "LITTLE EAGLET"

According to Ray Doyle of the Daily Mirror staff, however, investigation has proved that the Long Island boy is not the "Little Eaglet," whose fate stirred the world in 1932.

"I saw and talked with 'Brother,' the mystery baby of the Lindbergh case, last night," says Doyle in his article.

"I am positive he is not Charles Lindbergh, Jr.

"Brother is six years old, of Irish Catholic parentage, has a four-year-old sister who looks like him, and there is no question of his identity.

"Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., would be about five years old now, had he lived.

"For the protection of this child and the foster-parents, who are tenderly rearing him as their own son, I will not disclose his name or address—beyond saying that he lives in a cozy, one-family house surrounded by lawn and shrubbery."

From the lips of the foster-father, Doyle tells the story of "Brother":

"'You aren't the first to question us. A few weeks ago an investigator for Hauptmann's defense called and tried to get information. We declined to talk, because that is an orphanage rule and we won't risk losing our children.

"'Before he left, he said: "Keep this child close to the house. Don't let anyone see him—and be careful of kidnapers."

"'That annoyed me. Why should I keep him cooped up? Who would kidnap Brother?

"'When my wife and I bought this place, we expected a baby. But we were disappointed. Finally we went to a certain orphanage and after they had investigated, they gave us Sister, who was 18 months old. That was on July 5, 1932.

"'Three days later they gave us this boy, her brother, who was nearly three.'"

HANDS MISSING ON LINDY BABY

New York, Aug. 30—Dr. Erasmus M. Hudson, fingerprint expert who figured prominently in the Lindbergh kidnapping cse, said today that fingerprints of the Lindbergh baby could not be compared with those of the body identified as that of the child because 'the hands were missing fro mthe body."

According to the autopsy report which Dr. Charles H. Mitchell, Mercer County physician, gave New Jersey State police, the left hand and right forearm were missing from the body of the child

In California, where he is investigating "new evidence," C. Lloyd Fisher, chief attorney for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, said there is a child on Long Island who strongly resembles the Lindbergh child

Baby Lindy's Hair Checks With Body's

By Associated Press

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 30—A high State Police official said today the State had many noted scientists ready to testify the body found near Hopewell three years ago was that of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

They were not called, because Bruno Richard Hauptmann's defense did not challenge identification.

The official said the scientists would have testified the hair found on the body was identical with a lock of the Lindbergh baby's hair.

HUNGER STRIKE THREAT BY CLOUTIER

By ARTHUR J. QUINN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Biddeford, Me., Aug. 30—Desperate over his continued confinement, heedless of their pleas, Alexander Cloutier is going on a hunger strike, his attorneys disclosed today.

Cloutier, accused as the murderer of 17-year-old Florence Grenier, has set noon as the hour his "strike" starts.

The prisoner, in the first connected story of his actions the morning he is charged with having slain Miss Grenier, named three men who know what he was doing hour for hour, the attorneys said.

The counsel, Richard Armstrong and Simon Spill, claim that Cloutier is thus able to provide an "alibi" for the entire period between 8 a. m. and 12:15 p. m., Tuesday, August 20.

SHOUTS INNOCENCE

Cloutier, said Attorney Armstrong, was so vehement in his story that time and time again he raised his voice almost to a shout as he declared:

"I'm an innocent man, I tell you. I didn't do it. I thought they were going to let me go the night they first questioned me.

"I told the police the car was parked at the sawmill in Alfred that morning because I didn't want my father to know I had taken it.

"I thought they might tell him I used it without his permission. I had nothing else to conceal. I didn't kill Florence. I didn't even see her that day."

Then, said the lawyer, Cloutier said he wouldn't eat any more until authorities released him. Counsel quoted him:

"I am sick over this. No one has the right to lock me up like this for a crime I didn't commit. I will starve.

"I would rather die than be locked up here for something I didn't do. I will eat no more food today, or tomorrow—

"They will have to let me go. I am innocent, I tell you. I told police that. Don't you believe me either?"

The attorneys said they pleaded with Cloutier not to embark on anything like a hunger strike, but that he kept repeating:

"I will starve. I don't care. I want to be freed."

GUARDS INCREASED

As word of the prisoner's desperation circulated through the county jail in Alfred, the "suicide guards" were doubled.

Shortly before midnight three shifts of trusties, working two at a time, on eight-hour stretches, were assigned to watch Cloutier's cell.

In his interview with counsel, which followed a visit from his father, Cloutier gave the lie to a number of statements police have attributed to him, Attorney Armstrong said. The lawyer declared:

"He told us that he had never denied to state detectives having met Mederic La Belle the morning La Belle says he talked with our client."

Attorney Armstrong was asked if Cloutier meant that he had talked with the police witness. He replied:

"Cloutier said: 'I never told them I had not seen La Belle.'"

Armstrong said that the prisoner maintained he had told the police only one thing.

"'I did not kill her. I am an innocent man. I never did anything wrong in my life.'"

HIS OWN SURGEON
Abdomen Aches, Man Cuts It Open

By Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 30—Dr. Roger T. Vaughan, night warden of Cook County Hospital, today had under his care George Pajala, 45-year-old Czechoslovakian relief client, who avowedly performed an abdominal operation upon himself with a pocket knife and removed a part of his intestines.

Dr. Chester Guy, chief surgeon at the hospital, operated upon Pajala last night, following the man's removal from his home for emergency treatment.

HAD SUFFERED PAIN

Dr. Vaughan said Pajala apparently thought his act not unusual. He quoted Pajala as saying he had suffered from a pain in the lower abdomen and decided to operate upon himself because he was unable to pay for surgery.

He sharpened his pocket knife, made the incilson—nearly four inches long—and drew forth several inches of his intestines to examine them.

He then cut off that part which he thought caused the pain, and tried to thrust the rest back into place.

CALLS REAL DOCTOR

Failing that, and growing weaker, he sought the aid of Dr. Norbert Leckbacd, who sent Pajala to the county hospital.

Dr. Vaughan asserted Pajala told him he performed another operation upon himself several months ago and showed the scar.

Washington, Aug. 30—The resignation of Joseph H. Choate, Jr., as federal alcohol control administrator, was forecast today by some of his associates.

Federal Dole Ends In 2 States

Washington, Aug. 30—Works Progress Administrator Hopkins today ordered the federal dole ended in Alabama and Wyoming because the work relief program has promised sufficiently in these states to take care of all employables.

This is the first step, Hopkins said, toward the goal set by President Roosevelt of getting the federal government out of the "relief business" by November 1.

Direct relief will be terminated in many more states next month.

Aden, Arabia, Aug. 30 (INS)—The Imman of Yemen, monarch of 75,000 square miles on the Arabian shore of the Red Sea, has abdicated in favor of his eldest son, the Emir El Hadi Mohammed Seif Al Islam, according to reports today. Ill health was given as the reason.

NEW PLOTTING BRINGS SOVIET BREAK NEARER

By LINDESAY PARROTT
Universal Service

Moscow, Aug. 30—New instructions were issued to Communists today by the Communist international congress.

They detailed methods to be employed in overthrowing existing governments with the goal of establishing Communist Soviet regimes.

Observers here were convinced that the United States' threatened severance of relations with Russia was hourly drawing closer.

The instructions published by the Communist Internationale were considered likely to add strength to Washington's vigorous protest against Red propaganda.

Britain, Italy and Latvia also have protested to Moscow.

The American note threatened "serious consequences" if Moscow continued to violate her pre-recognition pledges to the United States.

The Communist instructions were seen as likely to be characterized by Washington as a "further violation."

FOR "COMING STRUGGLE"

Frank avowal that the principal purpose of the Communist party in forming a "united anti-Fascist front" is to use the weapon of a united working class in "the coming struggle for Soviet governments," was contained in the comintern congress resolutions.

In Fascist-governed countries, Communists were instructed to "bore from within, join Fascist organizations and set the interests of the mass of members against Fascist policy, impairnig the mass basis of Fascism."

In democracies such as the United States, the Communist party was instructed "to enlist intellectuals and the lower middle class against high prices, taxes, trusts, salary reductions and dismissals.

New Soviet Warning by U. S. Foreseen

Washington, Aug. 30 (US)—Moving with caution, the Roosevelt administration spent today pondering its reply to Soviet Russia on Communist activities.

Before the next step is taken, President Roosevelt will be consulted again.

Secretary of State Hull conferred at length on the position to be taken by this government with Assistant Secretary Moore and Robert F. Kelley, head of the division of Eastern European affairs.

The probable course will be a warning to Soviet Russia that another violation of its pledge to halt Communist meddling will bring about a severance of relations, and withdrawal of diplomatic representatives from Moscow.

Teachers' Union Refuses To Ban "Red" Chapter

By Universal Service

Cleveland, Aug. 30—The American Federation of Teachers, a nation-wide organization with a membership of 20,000 teachers, has broken sharply and decisively with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Following seven hours of bitter debate, the Teachers Federation, by a vote of 100 to 79, refused to yield to Green's demand that it dissolve and reorganize its New York chapter, the organization's largest and most powerful unit.

Green had demanded revocation of the New York local's charter on the grounds that it was "controlled and dominated by Communists."

By its action, the teachers' federation today appeared likely to lose its A. F. L. affiliation.

After disposing of the New York local fight in a manner that threatened to split the ranks wide open, the Federation re-elected Raymond Lowry of Toleda, as its president.

By its refusal to do so, the teachers federation today appeared likely to lose its A. F. L. affiliation.

Soviet Duplicity Calls For End of Recognition

THE Soviet reply to the American protest against Communist activities directed against our government is evasive, disingenuous and tricky.

AND IT TURNS UPON A FALSEHOOD!

The falsehood is expressed in weasel words, to be sure, BUT IT IS THERE, and exposes the Russians to a crushing retort.

Litvinoff, when he was angling for American recognition, signed a pledge to President Roosevelt:

"Not to permit the formation or residence on its (Russian) territory of any organization or group and to prevent the activity on its territory of any organization or group, or of representatives or officials of any organization or group, which has as an aim the overthrow or the preparation for the overthrow of, or bringing about by force of, a change in the political or social order of the whole or any part of the United States, its territories or possessions."

Now the Soviet suggests that there could be no inference from this pledge that it referred to the Communist Internationale.

AS a matter of fact, there could have been NO THOUGHT OF OR REFERENCE TO ANYTHING ELSE.

The subversive and hostile activities of the Communist Internationale and its dedication to world revolution as a theorem were among the basic reasons for the refusal of the United States to recognize the Soviet regime.

In his famous note refusing recognition, Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby had this to say of the Communist Internationale:

"Moreover, it is within the knowledge of the Government of the United States that the Bolshevist government is itself subject to the control of a political faction with extensive international ramifications through the Third Internationale, and that this body, which is heavily subsidized by the Bolshevist government from the public revenue of Russia, has for its openly avowed aim the promotion of Bolshevist revolutions throughout the world.

"Leaders of the Bolshevists have boasted that their promise of non-interference with other nations would in nowise bind the agents of this body. There is no room for reasonable doubt that such agents would receive the support and protection of any diplomatic agencies the Bolshevists might have in other countries.

"Inevitably the diplomatic service of the Bolshevist government would become a channel for intrigue and the propaganda of revolt against the institutions and laws of countries with which it was at peace, which would be an abuse of friendship to which enlightened governments cannot subject themselves."

IT was to meet this very point, which had proved an insurmountable obstacle to recognition, that the Litvinoff pledge above quoted was given.

It was IN RELIANCE upon this pledge that President Roosevelt reversed the attitude of this country and accorded the recognition which Russia had long sought in vain.

And now the Soviet commissar for foreign affairs has the insolence to say:

"It is certainly not unknown to the government of the United States that the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics cannot take upon itself and has never taken upon itself obligations of any kind with regard to the Communist Internationale."

Let us have done with these tongue-in-the-cheek duplicities of Soviet note-writers.

THE President now knows—to his obvious uneasiness and the tragic discredit of his administration—what everybody before him knew and well understood.

"We cannot," to quote from Secretary Colby's note again, "recognize, hold relations with, or give friendly reception to the agents of a government which is determined and bound to conspire against our institutions, whose diplomats will be the agitators of dangerous revolt, whose spokesmen say that they sign agreements with no intention of keeping them."

It is the plain duty of the United States to REVOKE and CANCEL A RECOGNITION WHICH SHOULD NEVER HAVE BEEN GIVEN.

Only consistency and clean-cut resolve will serve the President now.

The facts of the case are too plain for denial. Explanations cannot soften them. Equivocation and subtlety cannot obscure them.

The blunder of extending recognition can only be atoned for by undoing it.

We owe it to national self-respect and sound policy to withdraw and rescind our recognition.

AND THE WITHDRAWAL SHOULD BE PROMPT!

Love at Tub Just Bubble, Sailor Finds

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 30—Chief Petty Officer John W. Chandles, of the United States Navy, lost his bearings in a washtub while bobbing for apples with a pretty girl in New York on Hallowe'en, 1930. But he didn't tell about it until today.

The secret was disclosed in his petition for annulment of his marriage to a girl he knew only as Katherine.

They met at the tub and left the party. He bought her a fine ring. They were married and returned immediately to the party.

He lost her in the crowd, and has not seen her since.

BORAH, KNOX, LANDON LEAD FOR 1936 G. O. P. CHOICE

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Aug. 30—Out of the mists of Republican uncertainty and confusion there appear to be emerging three men who in the end may be battling it out for the Republican presidential nomination next year.

They are:

Governor Alfred M. Landon of Kansas, who has performed the political miracles of reducing expenditures and taxes when all about him were increasing theirs, and of getting himself elected and re-elected in the midst of two Democratic landslides.

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, long the lone wolf of Republican politics, strong in the West, weak in the East, getting along in years, but still full of youthful fire.

Colonel Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, most active of all the numerous possibilities, who is perfecting perhaps the most effective delegate organization of them all.

"FAVORITE SONS," OTHERS

Behind these three, the favorite son and other possibilities string out in a seemingly endless row—Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, Senator Dickinson of Iowa, Senator Steiwer of Oregon, Representative Hamilton Fish of New York, etc.

To many observers the Republican convention of 1936, now only 10 months away, is stacking up at this early date as somewhat reminiscent of the famous convention of 1920.

In that year, three stalwarts, Lowden, Wood and Johnson, battled themselves into deadlock and defeat, with the relatively obscure Warren G. Harding coming along at the last moment to gallop off with the nomination and certain election.

It may or may not be that history will repeat itself. Maybe no, for all Republican factions are agreed, even this early, that their sole hope for victory next year lies in unity, not division, such as might conceivably follow a bitterly contested convention.

BIG QUESTION MARK

The biggest question mark is the attitude of Herbert Hoover.

Ostensibly and publicly, he is not a candidate. Privately his friends assert he is "itching" for another try at the man who in 1932 sent him into retirement as the worst defeated presidential candidate in history.

Notwithstanding his "itch," his friends say he will not put himself forward as a candidate; that he wants to run, but only if the nomination comes to him on a platter.

He wants, they say, to be drafted. It is exceedingly unlikely he will be. But at the same time, his voice may be a determining factor in the eventual choice.

For in the 1936 convention, as delegates, will be many of Mr. Hoover's friends and ex-appointees, who held office under his administration and are to some extent under obligations, if not to him, at least to listen to him.

HOOVER STANDS PAT

Mr. Hoover has remained deaf to all entreaties, public and private, that he take himself out of all consideration by making a statement that he is not a candidate.

To do so, he has contended would mean complete effacement, and that he is not willing to do.

For while he may not be a candidate himself, as the titular leader of the party, and as the only living ex-President, who even in defeat polled in excess of 15,000,000 votes, he wants to have a voice in the naming of his successor and in the building of the Republican platform.

Nominating primaries are only eight months away, the convention ten.

Illinois, Nebraska and Pennsylvania all hold primaries in April, to be followed by Maryland, Indiana, Alabama, South Dakota, Ohio, West Virginia, Oregon and New Jersey in May.

They should be revealing.

Nudist Peep Trial Ends In Comedy

By International News Service

Netcong, N. J., Aug. 30—Netcong's bashful nudists were back in their scanty woods today and farmer Will Searles was guffawing as he mended fences where his property met theirs. The "peeping" trial brought by the sun worshippers had come to naught.

The nudists had charged that Searles was violating the law by standing on his own property and looking their way.

The resultant hearing was indecisive. Justice of the Peace Lewis Hyler chased the public from the courtroom. This included Mayor Thomas Koclan, who came back and chased the judge.

The nudists had insisted the courtroom be cleared before they would testify about Searles' reaction to human nature in the raw.

The mayor was mad. He fought his way back and declared the rial would be public or it would Judge Hyler adjourned the whole hing sine die, which he explained the reporters means indefinitely, held somewhere else.

Death Rate Mounts

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP)—Census bureau figures today showed that more Americans died in 1934 than in 1933. The 1934 total was 1,396,903, a rate of 11 per thousand, against 1,342,529 in 1933, or 10.7 per thousand.

PICKETS MARCH IN MILL STRIKE

Salem, Aug. 30—For the first time in a week, 400 pickets appeared today in front of the Pequot Mills.

Authorities were fearful of violence, while coal consuming industries and merchants breathed easier with the end of the coal truck drivers' strike.

Police were called to drive 50 children out of the picket lines. The children jeered police.

Wilfred T. Levesque, business agent for the striking mill workers' union, stated that the 2100 workers here had held a vote flatly rejecting any such terms.

Another source of official worry was the report that Ann Burlack, the "Communist Red Flame," has arrived to incite the workers.

Police began an immediate search for her, hoping to locate her before disturbances such as have frequently followed her appearances at labor dispute areas in the past might start.

AL CAPONE
Faces $120,000 Levy

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP)—Al Capone, Chicago beer baron now serving an 11-year sentence in Alcatraz penitentiary for income tax evasion today was assessed almost $120,000—for liquor taxes not paid.

Capone is charged with the illegal manufacture, distribution and sale of some 20,000 barrels of beer. The Treasury will take steps immediately to collect the assessment in a civil court proceeding.

Roosevelt Bonus Shift Predicted

By Associated Press

Belgrade Lakes, Me., Aug. 30—The prediction that President Roosevelt would advocate payment of the soldiers' bonus when Congress reconvenes was made today by Chase Mellen, Jr., chairman of the Republican county committee, New York County, N. Y.

Before a Maine Republican women's conference here Mellen further predicted that the President's recommendation would be most noticeable by its omission of any suggestion for additional taxes to cover "an additional expenditure of this magnitude."

Mellen prophesied the President's bonus recommendation would contain a statement that in effect would say:

"We are definitely out of the depression and well on the way to recovery. It is now time to give consideration to the claim of those men who sacrificed so much to answer the call of their country."

Allston Man Dead, Suicide Note

Carl Burgess, 38, a chauffeur, was found dead today in a kitchen chair of his apartment on Glenville avenue, Allston. A gas tube was tied to his mouth, police said.

A sealed note addressed to his mother, brother and sister was found on the kitchen table. Beneath the address was written:

"Notify Earl Burgess, Scranton road, Brookline."

MOTHER IS BACK TO SEE GLORIA

By Associated Press

New York, Aug. 30—Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt came home today from a hurried European trip for a week-end visit with her daughter Gloria.

Arriving by train from Canada, after crossing on the liner Empress of Britain, she said she cut her trip short in order to miss no part of the week-end.

She was accompanied by her twin sister, Lady Furness.

Eleven-year-old Gloria has been spending August at the Adirondack camp of her aunt, Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's appeal from the decision awarding custody of her child to Mrs. Whitney will come up in Albany, October 5.

Rain Bars Planes Over Crane Grave

Joshua Crane, Jr., was buried today.

He was one of New England's foremost flyers.

He was killed Wednesday when his new airplane spun in at State Airport, Hillsgrove, R. I.

Plans for a funeral cortege of more than 12 airplanes were thwarted by a low ceiling and rain.

Flyers from Boston, Natick, Providence and Norwood airports could not roar their cacophony of farewell over the Walnuts Hill Cemetery, Brookline, because the weather closed in.

Funeral services were conducted in Dedham Episcopal Church, and the cortege then drove to Walnut Hill Cemetery, Brookline.

Among floral tributes was one which was to have been dropped from an airplane. It was sent to the cemetery by Boston airport flyers.

It was the first conference attended by Mahon. He has been ill since he arrived Tuesday. Others present were John C. Carey, president of the Boston Carmen's Union; Michael J. Walsh, secretary, and Mathew J. McLaughlin, business agent.

Dana, in a statement, said:

"I met Mr. Mahon at 11 o'clock in a conference, which has followed previous conferences held with the Union Agreement committee, and have reached a point where both sides are in position to submit the matter, in one case to the Board of Trustees, and the other to the Union Agreement committee.

LIFE STORY OF MUSSOLINI—MAN OF DESTINY

JEALOUS MAYOR REBUKES DUCE FOR DRINKING

In this, the second of 12 articles, a distinguished writer of foreign affairs continues the life story of Benito Mussolini, whose career is brought in sharp relief by the East African adventure which may prove to be the zenith of his career.

The story was written for American readers and does not attempt to view Fascism either pro or con.

By J. C. OESTREICHER

Foreign Editor, International News Service

Copyright, 1935, by International News Service.

Benito Mussolini was 18 when he tasted first the bitter fruit of political defeat. He was rejected in Predappio for the post of Communal Scrivener, and decided, not without good sense, that the time had come to leave his father's hearth for fame and fortune elsewhere.

A recently-acquired diploma won him a teachership at Gualtiere in the district of Reggio Emilia. With the ebullience of youth and good health, his brief stay here was a joyous one, with card-playing, wine-drinking and dancing with the pretty girls of the town providing relaxation from the dignity of the schoolroom.

But with his singular flair for political rows, he early entered into an altercation with the mayor. The latter, a bootmaker in the time away from official duties, had made a stumbling address at a local political gathering.

Someone called for the black-haired schoolteacher. The occasion was a tribute to Garibaldi and his sponsor thought Mussolini might know enough about the country's hero to make the speech.

But when it was over, the mayor took occasion to upbraid Mussolini for his undignified behavior in the town. Dancing and drinking and walking about without a coat—hardly proper deportment for a school-teacher paid to set an example to his pupils.

Benito listened, then still drunk with the thrill of power over his audience, he curtly told the mayor to go back to his bootmaking, packed his few belongings and started out again into the world.

Beggar, He Goes Into 11 Jails

In almost every great man's life there is a tragic chapter. Mussolini's was written in Lausanne in 1902, when for months there was no money, no work.

He was reduced to beggary. He learned the lesson of many aliens in this peaceful land of homage—that a single franc piece in the pockets is immunity from arrest.

Less than this betokens vagrancy. Men have starved to death rather than part with this silver coin which means freedom at least from the bars of a cell.

But there was a day when Benito had not even this franc and wound up in prison—the first of the long series of short and long jail terms he served on his way to power.

He has written himself that jail is essential experience in the life of a public man.

He saw the inside of 11 prisons all told, and while he fought bitterly against each successive imprisonment, accepted them philosophically when the sentence was pronounced.

With all its steady work, pleasant companionships and dignified halls of learning, Switzerland, however, proved a difficult host.

Benito never allowed himself to forget he considered himself above all an organizer and propagandist for Socialism, and with these activities came the inevitable cafe fracases, appearance before magistrates, and, at last, expulsion from the country.

Editorials Win Him Bigger Job

The next few years were years of travel—mainly in Italy, for although he tried his luck across the Adigo in Austria he was soon deported—and of journalism, teaching and politics.

The year 1910 found him back at Forli, the main support of his family, the secretary of the Socialist Association, and editor of La Lotta di Classe. He was accepted as one of the leaders of the Socialist movement.

His activities in this sphere lasted until the middle of 1912.

It was then that the Avanti published at Milan, harkened to the stentorian voice thundering in the little Forli paper and called him to the big city as editor.

Day after day, his prolific pen filled the pages of Avanti with Socialistic sermons.

He tilted his lance at the windmill of Freemasonry and won his battle. The Congress of Ancona proclaimed that in the future Socialists must no longer be Freemasons.

This struggle won, he launched full tilt at the ruling classes and the bourgeoisie.

He saw in the bureaucratic monarchial system that was pre-war Italy a hand of death throttling the common people. He rebelled against a system which meant starvation for many and luxuries for a few, and at length publicly approved a violent anti-government demonstration at Roccagorga.

Many were killed and wounded—both government troops and the people. The mob had first attacked, beating down many soldiers before they could fire.

"Free Me Because I Am Guilty!"

The authorities called it a "massacer." Mussolini and his associates on the Avanti hailed it as proof of the need for social reform.

They demanded repetitions—more sacrifice of life if need be to show Italy's rulers that reforms had to be had.

They were placed on trial in Milan for subversive activities.

Mussolini pleaded his own case, demanded acquittal not because he was innocent but because he was guilty.

"I will say to you," he roared, "that you ought to acquit us, not because we have not committed the offense, but because we have committed it and because we promise to commit it again.

"Imagine an Italy in which 36 millions of citizens should all think in the same way as though their brains were cast in the same shape. Why, you would have a madhouse or rather a realm of utter boredom and imbecility.

"It is necessary that side by side with those who cry 'No! No!' there should be those who cry 'Yes! Yes!'—side by side with society, those who would fain demolish it.

those who exalt the army, those

"What we stand in need of are who decry it—side by side with dissensions, clashes of view, strife. Unanimity, uniformity, spell brainlessness and death."

This was in 1913. Today, who dares to say "No! No!" to Benito Mussolini?

He has a nation of almost 100 per cent unanimity and uniformity. Dissension is not for a moment, tolerated. Freedom of thought and action are banned in his totalitarian state.

Here again is the essence of Mussolini—contradictions and inconsistency of detail on one straight, clear path to power.

He allows but one viewpoint—Mussolini's. In extenuation, he can say that so far as Italy is concerned, he has been right. He has made it a first class power and of its people a proud people.

How and why Mussolini's original Socialist followers broke away from him is told in the third article of this series in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

By International News Service

Washington, Aug. 30—The Faca bill, designed to place the alcohol industry under supervision of the government, was signed today by the President.

LUTHERANS MAY DEFY NAZIS

By Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 30—The Protestant Confessional (Lutheran) Synod today or tomorrow must reply to a State order which may lead to its dissolution.

The Synod must decide whether it is willing to accept "as a passing measure" State management of church affairs, as decreed by Hans Kerrl, deputy in charge of church affairs.

To accept the offer means to fly in the face of what all the Synod's leaders, Bishop Karl Koch, Bishop Martin Niemoeller, and the bishops of Bavaria, Wuerttemberg and Hanover, have fought for—independence of the church from State domination.

To reject it may mean, in addition to dissolution of the Confessional Synods, withdrawal of State subsidies from pastors and congregations belonging to Confessional Councils and possible, even, the arrest of pastors who continue to preach.

Distiller Resumes Old Business at 80

Julius Kessler has entered the whiskey business.

He is not exactly a newcomer to the trade.

Mr. Kessler is 80. When the prohibition law went into effect in 1918, he was known as the "dean of American distillers." For a time he was the much-flayed "whiskey trust" of pre-war days.

He is, in short, one of that fabulous group of real Americans—although he was born abroad and has spent the last 20 years in his native Hungary—who helped to build our country in the days of its greatest expansion and whose lives have become almost legendary.

And at 80, he is back in the country of his youth and manhood to go into business again.

Why?

"Because I believe a man should make his energy useful while he is young. I've got 20 more years of hard work in me, then I'll rest 20 more."

And looking at him, you can't help but believe him.

"I've got a date," he confides, "to have a birthday dinner in Paris 10 years from now with Mr. Hearst and Mr. Brisbane. And don't let anyone tell you I won't be there."

As to his new business venture—

"It was nice being a big philanthropist in my native country, but it wasn't enough work. I had to leave here when prohibition came. I was too big a man in the whisky trade. I couldn't have stayed here and kept out of the way of the lawbreakers.

"But, when I heard about repeal, I got interested right away.

"A fine blended whisky that will sell at around a dollar. And I know what a good blended whisky is. Why you wouldn't have thought in the old days of beginning to use a whisky for blending until it had 'turned.' And no whisky is 'turned' until it is at least two years old."

But to the present-day citizen of a possibly over-civilized America the real interest of Julius Kessler lies in past.

The days which saw him, as a boy of 17 migrate from Budapest to Cincinnati, then to Omaha on the fringe of civilization.

Victim's Widow Sees Slayers Die

By International News Service

New Madrid, Mo., Aug. 30—While the youthful widow of their victim looked on stoically, Roy Hamilton and Eddie Gayman at dawn today paid with their lives on the gallows for the Christmas eve holdup slaying in 1933 of Arthur Cashion.

The 33-year-old widow got up before daylight and drove the five miles from her home at Lilbourn, Mo., to witness the event.

She watched without any outward show of emotion as Sheriff Sam Harris sprung the traps which sent the two slayers to their death.

SENATOR POPE SEES U. S. IN LEAGUE SOON

By Associated Press

Paris, Aug. 30—Senator Pope of Idaho, in an expression of personal opinion, said today the United States should join the League of Nations eventually if the Italio-Ethiopian quarrel were settled in Geneva.

Pope, here on his way to observe unofficially next week's session of the League Council, said the only solution of the Ethiopian problem was "the application of sanctions or some similar measures at Geneva."

He talked with Premier Laval but said he based his "purely personal" conclusions on general observations in England and France.

"It is up to the League now," he said. "If the League succeeds it undoubtedly will start the ball rolling in the United States.

"Naturally, this would not mean immediate entry but it would mean the growing cooperation of America with the League, eventually leading to entry.

"On the other hand, if the Italo-Ethiopian question is not settled in Geneva, it will be a serious blow to the League's power to settle international disputes.

"The League will still be a powerful instrument for peace in quarrels of lesser magnitude, but its value will certainly be greatly impaired as a means of settling differences between big powers."

Pope said his talk with Laval "got to the bottom of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute," but he declined to disclose details.

He said he plans to meet several European statesmen for "confidential talks on the international situation" before he goes to Geneva Sept. 2.

August's wane tonight and tomorrow will be attended by chill breezes and rain, according to the weather forecast.

In other sections of the country, as well as in Boston, low temperatures prevail. Mt. Washington, in the Berkshires, registered 34 degrees.

Seven years ago today, Boston sweltered in a temperature of 93 degrees. That distant August 30 and August 31, 1881, when the temperature also hit 93, are the warmest days on record for this date. The minimum was reached in 1912. It was 49 degrees then, on August 30.

$40,000,000 STOCK GIFTS EVADE TAX

By Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 30 — Gifts of some $40,000,000 in securities by corporation directors and large stockholders, most of them made when the program for high gift taxes was announced, were disclosed today by reports to the Securities Commission.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., with donations of $28,000,000 in two months, was the biggest giver.

Total gift taxes to be paid under existing legislation would approximate $12,300,000 against $14,500,000 under the new bill, effective January 1, 1936.

HIGH RATE ON BIG GIFTS

These figures are probably high, officials said, because many gifts are broken up.

Rockefeller, for example, reported $27,000,000 in June to individuals and charitable organizations.

Figured as one gift the present tax would be $10,900,000 against $12,346,000 under the new bill, but since there actually were several gifts the tax would be lower.

The high rates start on the larger gifts.

Gifts in July were more than $5,000,000 on the basis of reports received by the commission, but this total probably will be augmented later.

The total for June, aside from the Rockefeller gift, was about $5,000,000, and for the previous three months about $5,000,000.

MELLON GIFT $1,380,000

Other July gifts included $1,380,000 by Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury; $1,470,000 by Kate Hanna Harvey of Cleveland; $700,000 by Henry J. Fisher, New York; $600,000 by Charles S. Woolworth, Scranton, Pa., and $727,000 by Edward Cornell, New York.

The Securities Exchange Act provided for such reports on the ground they would furnish a check of speculations by "insiders," such as the corporation's officers, and show up manipulation.

Profits made by officers are recoverable by suit of stockholders.

CONGRESS COST IN DISPUTE

By International News Service

Washington, Aug. 30—Sharp disagreement over the cost of the session of Congress just ended was revealed today in a post-session issue of the Congressional Record.

Chairman Buchanan of the appropriation committee, revising an earlier, higher estimate, placed the session's total authorizations at $10,073,370,543. This includes $500,000,000 relief obligations placed on the RFC.

Representative Taber (R.) of New York said the session appropriated $10,256,000,000.

Disagreeing with a previous statement by Taber, who said the public debt will reach the staggering total of $40,000,000,000 next year, Buchanan said the Treasury's estimate is $34,000,000,0000.

Hamilton's Kin Refuses Body

By International News Service

Chicago, Aug. 30—Relentless G-men are searching for the persons who harbored John Hamilton, notorious pal of the slain John Dillinger, nursed him and buried him in a shallow grave near Oswego, Ill., it was learned today.

Meanwhile, the body of the "brains" of the Dillinger gang rested on a slab in an Oswego undertaking parlor unclaimed.

A brother, Elmer J. Hamilton of Kenosha, Wis., when informed that he might claim the body replied:

"I am not in any way interested."

If the body is not claimed within three days Hamilton will be buried in Potter's Field.

JOB CHANCES

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP)—Civil Service Commission officials said today they are unable to start a huge examination job at present because of the failure of the third deficiency appropriations bill to pass Congress.

The measure contained $500,000 for examining thousands of applicants for vacancies created by passage of the postal clerks' 40-hour-week bill.

BOSTON SENDS PWA PROGRAM

While Washington is still waiting to receive the State PWA projects program, Boston's requirements are being forwarded today.

Mayor Mansfield signed, and sent to Governor Curley for signature, an $8,750,000 program of public works, which will be in the Capitol well under the deadline of September 4.

Included in the plans approved were the first $3,000,000 section of the Aberjona project; a new $2,500,000 City Hall; an $850,000 Chelsea bridge, and a project for seven Boston schools to cost a total of $2,385,000.

The Aberjona project is the section of the new sewerage plan which will serve the Winchester-Woburn district.

So far a total of $25,564,000 in PWA projects has been received at the State PWA office for approval, most of which has been forwarded to Washington.

The allotment for State PWA work for September will be only $600,000, according to Administrator Arthur G. Rotch, half a million less than for August.

Topsfield Fair Opens Today

There will be cattle and flower shows.

In the women's department visitors will find a display of finery, rugs, blankets and other handicraft all produced by the county's mothers.

"ALL-BRAN FORMS MAJOR PORTION OF MY BREAKFAST"

Delicious Cereal Relieved His Constipation*

Read Mr. Huyghe's voluntary letter: "After suffering for years, I happened to notice in the grocery a box of ALL-BRAN. I determined to give it a fair trial.

"Today it forms the major portion of my breakfast. I cannot say enough for its effect, as I am a man 58 years of age, at a time in life when one needs just what ALL-BRAN does for you."—Mr. Robt. A. Huyghe, 810 Union Street, New Orleans, La.

Constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.*

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" to exercise the intestines. Also vitamin B and iron.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. With each meal, in serious cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN resists digestion better than the "bulk" in leafy vegetables. How much better to use this gentle food in place of patent medicines.

At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

By BETTY ALDEN

TRUTH REALLY IS stranger than fiction after all . . . You have probably read in the history books about the sagacious Yankee who sent a ship load of bed warmers to the West Indies and, strangely enough, found a ready market there as the natives used them for melting sugar cane . . .

And now, Suzanne Davis, another Yankee, will take something which is typically Northern and New England, namely her ability as a skater, to the southland where ice is just something to put in the ice box . . . For Sue is planning to give up her career as a skater, which carried her to national, even international fame, and won her the national woman's figure skating championship, to become Mrs. William Haven King of Richmond, Virginia . . .

MRS. W. H. KING

Nothing could be more fitting for her farewell to New England than the old fashioned New England garden which formed the setting for her wedding this afternoon . . . The green of the lawns on the estate of her mother, Mrs. Francis Woodward Davis of Waban, and the soft colors of the flowers formed an harmonious background for the ceremony . . . Because of the rain a large tent was erected over the whole garden.

The Rev. Lloyd R. Gillmett of Boston read the service and Mr. Cyrus Yale Ferris of Akron, Ohio, uncle of the bride, gave her away . . . Her wedding dress was fashioned very simply, on princess lines, of ice blue satin with a matching tulle veil and a bouquet of white shasta daisies . . .

Mrs. J. Hathaway White of Waban was the matron of honor and her little daughter, Fay Ellen White, the flower girl . . . Mrs. White wore a gown of French blue crepe with a matching hat and an arm bouquet of varicolored summer flowers . . .

Maribel Vinson One of the Bridesmaids

IN THE BEVY OF BRIDESMAIDS, all of whom wore chartreuse gowns with matching hats, were Maribel Vinson, another famous skater; Suzanne Saville of Dallas, Texas, and Marion Ferris of Akron, Ohio, cousins of the bride; Mary Elizabeth Stanwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Stanwood of Wellesley Hills and Squirrel Island, Maine; Diana Cummings of New York City, a recent graduate of Radcliffe, and Polly Paine of West Newton and Duxbury, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Paine.

Mr. Robert Doscher of Pearl River, N. Y., a classmate of the bridegroom at Dartmouth, was the best man, and in the usher corps were the Messrs. Justin A. Stanley of Indianapolis, Richard Jackson of Boston, Philip T. King of Richmond, Virginia; Evan R. Collins of Forest Hills, N. Y.; Samuel O. Davis, a brother of the bride, and James E. King, Jr., of Richmond . . .

Mrs. Davis, the bride's mother, wore a sapphire blue chiffon gown with a matching hat, and Mrs. James Edward King, the mother of the bridegroom, attended the wedding gowned in a black flowered silk with a wide brimmed black straw hat . . .

Mr. King was graduated from Dartmouth in 1933 and later attended the Harvard Law School and the Law School at the University of Virginia . . . His clubs include the Casque and Gauntlet and Psi Upsilon fraternity . . . This fall he plans to continue his law studies at Washington and Lee University . . .

The bride was graduated from Beaver Country Day and the Erskine School . . . In addition to winning the women's singles championship in 1934, she and Frederick Goodrich of Cambridge captured the national pair dancing championship, and this year she was runner-up to Maribel Vinson for the women's singles title . . . She is the daughter of the late Mr. Francis Woodward Davis . . .

McLane-Crawford Ceremony

MANY BOSTONIANS are interested in the announcement by Mrs. Edward Motley Weld of New York of the marriage of her daughter, Mrs. Anne Weld Crawford, to Allan McLane, Jr., of New York . . . The wedding took place at Mrs. Weld's home at Tuxedo Park, in the presence of a few relatives and intimate friends . . .

Yesterday the bride and groom sailed for a honeymoon in Bermuda and upon their return will make their home in New York . . .

The bride has many family connections among the large Weld clan in Boston and is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Minot Weld and of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Parsons King . . . Her father, who died in 1929, for many years figured very prominently in social and sporting circles of both New York and Boston . . . He was treasurer of the United Hunts Racing Association and played on the Dedham polo team that won the United States championship in 1900 . . . Her brothers are Edward Motley Weld and Lothrop M. Weld . . . She was married in 1931 to William Crawford Jr., of New York, which union ended recently in divorce . . .

The bride is a graduate of the Chapin School and Oldfields in Maryland . . . Mr. McLane graduated in 1916 from Yale where he was coxswain of the varsity crew during his junior year . . . He served overseas as an ambulance driver during the World War and was awarded the Croix de Guerre . . . His first marriage, to the former Edith G. Pratt, was also terminated by divorce . . .

"TROUBLE FIXER" IN DRIVE ON DUMPS

"THE TROUBLE FIXER"

Public Service Department, Boston Evening American

This department has been instituted as a public service for Boston Evening American readers. It will endeavor to solve problems and fix troubles dealing with city, state or public utility service. Requests must be specific and brief. No anonymous requests, nor matters of a purely private nature can be considered.

In answer to a request by "The Trouble Fixer" the Hull board of health reports in reply to a complaint that a lot in back of Paragon Park, Nantasket Beach, was unsanitary:

"This dump is on private property and so far as we know, there has been no filling put into this area within the last three months which we would consider a menace to public health."

"The Trouble Fixer" will give especial consideration to all requests for investigation and cleaning up of unsanitary dump conditions.

The health departments of Boston, and neighboring towns, are cooperating in a drive to abolish health menaces.

The Boston health department reports it is cleaning up an unsanitary yard in Hamlin street, South Boston, on complaint of a resident of that street.

The department is also working on another complaint about unsanitary conditions at a place in O street, South Boston.

FORTUNATE are those who do not have to think of food for the weekend.

Those remaining at home are undoubtedly entertaining, and the markets are full of choice fruits, vegetables, fish, and poultry.

If guests are visiting from out of town, why not serve a Shore Dinner? New England is famous for these, and they will be not only satisfying, but educational as well.

STEAMED CLAMS

Clams for steaming should be bought in the shell and should always be alive. Wash clams thoroughly, scrubbing with brush, changing water several times. If held tail uppermost under faucet, sand will be washed out. Put into large kettle, allowing ½ cup hot water to 4 quarts clams. Cover closely and steam until shells partially open, care being taken that they are not overdone.

Serve with individual dishes of melted butter. Some prefer a few drops of lemon juice or vinegar added to the butter. If a small quantity of boiling water is put into the dishes the melted butter will float on top and remain hot much longer. The liquor left in the kettle is served in glasses with the clams.

CLAM CHOWDER

1 quart clams
4 cups potatoes, cut in ¾-inch cubes
1½-inch cube fat salt pork
1 sliced onion
1 tablespoon salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
4 tbsps. butter
4 cups scalded milk
8 common crackers

Clean and pick over clams, using 1 cup cold water; drain, reserve liquor, heat to boiling point, strain. Chop finely hard part of clams; cup pork in small pieces and try out; add onion, fry 5 minutes and strain into a stewpan.

Parboil potatoes 5 minutes in boiling water to cover; drain and put a layer in bottom of stewpan; add chopped clams, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and dredge generously with flour; add remaining potatoes, again sprinkle with salt and pepper, dredge with flour, and add 2½ cups boiling water.

Cook 10 minutes, add milk, soft part of clams and butter; boil 3 minutes and add crackers split and soaked in cold milk to moisten. Reheat clam water to boiling point and thicken with one tablespoon butter and flour cooked together. Add to chowder just before serving.

This Is Life by ROBERT E. ROGERS

Now it no longer seems doubtful that Prosperity is just around the corner, so close in fact that we are likely to bump into her, step on her toes, and otherwise incommode her.

Jimmy Walker, the egregious and unique Jimmy, has apparently been given the office that he can come home any time he likes.

Robert E. Rogers

New York comment seems to take it for granted that he will take immediate advantage of his offer, notwithstanding the fact that he has just had all his huge official scrapbooks shipped over to England.

This is the latest and most important of the indications of returning prosperity; the increase in the coinage of small change as an indication of increasing buying power; the savings banks and insurance figures; the approaching war, always an index of high prosperity—while it lasts.

Bright colored clothes for men; shorter skirts for women; and the adjournment of Congress.

All these are minor indications of prosperity.

But the return of Jimmy Walker will be like the geese flying north again, the first robin and bluebird, the opening of the baseball season, the first hot dog stand at Revere Beach, and the return of the hurdygurdy as the horse chestnuts blossom.

Tammany, under the Roosevelt-Farley thumb, may take heart again, the night clubs can once more start recruiting their choruses of nude cuties.

The dance orchestras may dig out of the dusty piles of old music the fly-spotted copies of "Will You Love Me in December as You Did in May" and maybe that more recent favorite, "Oh, Say Can You Seabury?" with a jingling cash box obligato.

Jazz Age! ! !

There are those who insist that the jazz age is definitely gone and that Jimmy can't possibly revive it. But these are crass determinists.

They believe that Jimmy was simply a function of the jazz age and that a new morality will produce new and different leaders.

Other times, other Jimmies! But surely this is a pessimistic view of the power of the human spirit.

Is it not possible to believe that Jimmy helped create the jazz age and that his return will automatically take the lid off?

Who will be able to stand up against his charm?

The reformers couldn't do a thing to him. The United States government has nothing on him.

And from Hollywood comes the news that some folks are considering Jimmy as a possible successor to Will Rogers in the public affections.

The well beloved hero of the plain folks of America, the homely, kindly, shrewd, honest, decent cracker-box philosopher may too give place to the wasp-waisted, dandy who wise-cracks in the argot of the tenderloin.

His picture will have to be written by Damon Runyon, of course, and there is no fear that the former Mayor of New York will not do justice to the characters and the patter of the genius who wrote "Guys and Dolls" and invented a new style of narrative composition.

The whole business is an impressive tribute to a man who has for these several years now schooled himself to sit like Patience on a Monument, smiling at grief.

Has learned to suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous Fortune, to bear the whips and scorns of time, the oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely, the law's delay, the insolence of office, and the spurns that patient merit of the unworthy takes——!

Why, William Shakespeare must have been clairvoyant

I suggest that the first film Hollywood assigns to Jimmy shall be "Hamlet."

He still has his figure and a certain natural vivacity, both essential to the part.

And certainly no professional actor out of his limited experience could utter more sincerely those lines in the immortal soliloquy which I have hinted at above.

He bore his fardels with resignation and fortitude. Under his weary load he neither grunted nor sweated.

Above all, it apparently never occurred to him to make his quietus with a bare bodlin.

Instead he entered the ancient and honorable trade of columnist and told us all about the great Economic Conference of 1932 and why it washed out.

He took arms against a sea of troubles, and opposing, ended 'em.

Only the sourest puritan, the most tenacious reformer, the Seaburyest of Seaburies would grudge him his repatriation.

Bang the trumpets, beat the drums, see the whitewashed Hero comes!

RADIO PREVIEW OF NEW FILM PRODUCTION

By N. F. T.

Plans have been completed for a vivid version of "Page Miss Glory," the newest striking screen comedy-drama starring Marion Davies. Broadcasting is this evening.

It is taking to the air in Hollywood tonight and is a "Hollywood Hotel" program highlight (WNAC) at 9 o'clock, in which Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien, Frank McHugh and Patsy Kelly will support Miss Davies.

Tomorrow finds friend Floyd Gibbons getting his baggage aboard a big transatlantic boat and clambering aboard himself, headed for the center of all the Italian-Ethiopian turmoil. This evening the dynamic "Headline Hunter" of newspaper and radio prominence, will say so long in his inimitable style (WAAB) with a coast-to-coast air audience able to hear his au revoir between 5.15 and 5.30 p. m. He answers the "All-Aboard for Addis Ababa" call to serve the International News Service. His first hand dispatches will be Boston Evening American features when he reaches the scene of hostilities, if any, and when Floyd Gibbons gets going anywhere, the chances are some spirited action is imminent.

Much campaigning activity is promised by the G. O. P. forces during the coming Fall and Winter listening season. They've taken on special promotion and publicity men to ballyhoo the "mike" fight. Now they should figure to line up a few spokesmen who can really talk on the radio and some loud-speaker patron interest might be aroused and held awhile.

TUNEFUL TURN

Early romance attending the settling and development of California provides the theme for that regular weekly operetta offering (WNAC) due again this evening between 9 and 10 o'clock. An impression of the Victor Herbert musical gem "Natoma" will hold forth, with Francia White in the studio spotlight.

Two of the current song rages, 'East of the Sun" and "You Saved My Life." are on the schedule for vocalizing by Ruth Etting tonight (WBZ) during her "College Prom" dial diversion at 8.30 p. m. Red Nichols and his men make the music.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

Note: The letter below has been received from Marcel Marier, 17, of 7486 St. Denis street, Montreal, an ambitious and enterprising French-Canadian member of the Junior Birdmen. He sends the letter from St. Chrysostome where he is vacationing. The letter is just as he wrote it with the exception of a change or two in punctuation and capitalization. Junior Birdmen are sure to find it interesting.

"I am back with you for the second time. I am late to show you my gratitude but I can also show it to you. I thank you to admit me in your great club and I am proud of it.

"Since a week I am working on a new type of airplane and today I finished it. It is a 'flying wing.' I don't know if it is the right name but in French we call that 'une aile volante.'

"My motor who will make fly my 'aile volante' is a small Wright with two cylinders. Its force is 37½ horsepower and it is quite strong to make the speed of 59 miles per hour. I will make it approved by the Junior Birdmen of America Institute as soon as my mother will give me the permission to go at Boston in my 'aile volante.'

"Now for the unit. I am in vacation here but I will be in Montreal next week. I have a unit of more than 50 members. I am proprietor and general manager of the flying club 'Les Chevaliers de l'Air' and I asked my council if they would like to unite with the Junior Birdmen of America and they said, 'You are the proprietor, do what you want.'

"I am only 17 years old so I have to see sometimes the instructor and my council to see if I am not wrong. So I join my club to yours. In September, I guess I will have more than 120 members. The name of our new unit is Les Chevaliers de l'Air du club Junior Birdmen of America.

"It is a French division and the courses are in French. Our instructor is Commander R. Marier. To my 50 members I proposed to them, two weeks ago, if they would like to go to Boston in airplane. Fifteen members told me yes, so as soon as I will be in Montreal I will make my invention in execution and build 18 "ailes volantes."

"I think that in less than 14 months we will see you at Boston. I will form five flight squadrons of three airplanes in flight squadron. I thank you for your good will and I will see you later.

"MARCEL MARIER."

Comedy Reigns

Fun Aplenty in 'Hot Tip'

By ANN AMES

With all eyes and purses on the ponies these days, it's not surprising to find "Hot Tip" on the screen at the Keith-Boston.

There are a couple of fast and finely photographed horse races in "Hot Tip," with ZaSu Pitts and Jimmy Gleason much concerned about the outcome. They climaxed a light, bright, and clever comedy.

It's no great shakes, perhaps, and with the very beautiful and spectacular Follies Bergeres on the Keith-Boston stage, it probably won't get much attention.

However, Mr. Gleason is a very funny fellow. And Miss Pitts, given a part where she can do something more than wring her hands and affect a bad tremulo, shames her countless imitators with a performance that matches his.

Jimmy runs a lunch room and dopes horses. ZaSu keeps the family bank roll, mildly nags her gambling spouse, and gets pretty insistent that the daughter of the family remain single until her hard-working boy friend acquires his own auto-washing business.

When the enamored youngsters stake Jimmy to a $200 bankroll, far through the night he pores over his dope sheets, picking a ng named Leap Pipe to to run up the capital to $2000.

Disregarding the gambler's credo to stick to your hunches, Jimmy lets a few race-track hangers-on change his mind and his horse. Lead Pipe of course romps in.

But there's another day, seven more races and a horse named Honey Girl. And there's plenty of excitement and plenty of laughs before the nose-and-nose finale.

The inevitable bit of slapstick creeps in here and there. But on the whole you'll find "Hot Tip" a diverting and commendably constructed tale of the tracks

The young people involved are Margaret Callahan, making her screen debut pleasingly, and the next younger generation in the famous Gleason family, Russell.

Shirley Film Held Over

Shirley Temple in her latest starring picture, "Curly Top," will be held over for another week starting tomorrow at the Modern. John Boles and Rochelle Hudson are featured in the cast with the baby star.

The companion picture will be "Every Night At Eight," with George Raft and Alice Faye heading the cast.

Dying From Cut

Lawrence, Aug. 30—Suffering from loss of blood, Charles Ramby, 37, of Phillips court, North Andover, is in a critical condition today at Lawrence General Hospital. The arteries in his neck and left arm were severed when a bottle he was trying to open burst.

Park Delays Burlesque

Manager Max Michaels has postponed the opening of Minsky's Park Theater from Labor Day until the following Monday.

The Minsky cycle of burlesque, the most elaborate yet planned, will open with the revue that has held the stage of the newest of the Minsky houses at Hollywood. Scenery and costumes for the opening bill of the season are en route from the coast, necessitating the change in opening date.

Ginger Britten, Mary Green, Elsa Lang, Mike Sachs and Stanley Simmons head the cast.

Today and every day you will find excellent used cars in the Automobile-For-Sale Columns of the American and Advertiser.

HOLLAND

'FOLIES Bergeres' Well Nigh Perfect

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Playing to nearly 12,000 persons for a total intake of almost $6000 on the day, smashing all records for the Keith-Boston Theater in both number of attendants and gross receipts, the sensational "Folies Bergeres" revue invaded Boston yesterday.

If this sounds like the opening of a review which might better suit a trade journal, I beg your indulgence for a moment or two longer to point out that the current week ranks with the week before Christmas and Holy Week as the worst stanzas of the theatrical season.

George Holland

Hence the amazing pull of the imported revue, which came here after eight months at the French Casino, a night-club, in New York, takes first mention here over the report that the "Folies Bergeres" is well-nigh perfect entertainment, artistically produced and thoroughly satisfactory.

* * *

"Folies Bergeres" is punctuated by some of the most startling dancing feats ever beheld by these eyes. For the most realistic of interpretations in the art of the dance, the "Snake Dance" performed by a couple named Harold and Lola must be given a high rating.

This girl is so reptilian as she coils about her partner that a watcher becomes fascinated. The man handles her perfectly. This dance is Continental, and most of the other entertainment has the same flavor.

* * *

But a young woman from Belmont, whose stage name is Gloria Gilbert, is the outstanding feature of the show. They call her the "human top." She pirouetted so fast at the closing show last night, the illusion came across that a two-headed girl was whirling around the stage. There is no dancer in the world capable of duplicating Miss Gilbert's work.

* * *

Emil Boreo, the European star who came to America ten years ago with the second Chauve Souris, is the conferencier of the "Folies Bergere." His conception of the "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" found great favor with the audience, and he stopped the show later with a piece of prime mimicry of a song delivered by an Italian, a Russian, a Frenchman and an American singer.

The famous "apple dance," the ultimate in nudity, is a featured fillip of "Folies Bergere." Maria Desty was programed as the principal of this well-staged number. As far as I could discover, she wore only a balloon.

Another dancer was becomingly gowned in a white muff, and the show-girls and chorus were costumed seasonally in not very much of anything.

* * *

One of the cleverest turns of the show is given by the Lime Trio. Eric Lime is the contortionist in this act. He comes out of an express box as a Golliwog and bounces around the stage like a rag doll.

The Manginis, two male acrobats, opened to snickers from the audience. One of the Manginis affects a silly posture for the opening of the act. In a minute of hand-stands the titters changed to applause and the act finished to an ovation.

Kella Slavinska and Ballet Komarova are very good. "Folies Bergeres" includes also a "Seven Veils" dance. I do not believe there is much more to say.

"Mary of Scotland" Next Hepburn Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, Aug. 30—The Hepburn, whose stock since "Alice Adams" has gone sky high, is leaving for Europe as soon as she finishes "Sylvia Scarlett.'

But Katie will come back—oh yes, indeed—for Pan Berman who considers the Hepburn the greatest actress of them all, has purchased "Mary of Scotland," the Helen Hayes play, to follow "Sylvia Scarlett."

Louella O. Parsons

I am told that Pan paid Maxwell Anderson, author of "Mary of Scotland," a pretty price but no amount could be too much if Hepburn would do the kind of a job she does in "Alice Adams."

* * *

Tickets were bought for Honolulu, plans were made for a second honeymoon for Gloria Stuart and Arthur Sheekman when Carl Laemmle telephoned and asked Gloria if she wouldn't appear in "The Invisible Ray" opposite Bela Lugosi and Boris Karloff

Well, Gloria is a trouper so she turned in her Honolulu tickets and accepted the Universal offer to be directed by Stuart Walker in "Invisible Ray," which features Lugosi and herself.

* * *

Chatter in Hollywood: Somewhere in Hollywood there is a crank who delights in telephoning Hollywood stars of the death of some of their loved ones. Only a few weeks ago Mrs. Clark Gable was told that Clark had committed suicide. At the moment she was listening to him on the radio and knew it couldn't be true.

Ruby Keeler, three times, has been phoned the tragic news of Al Jolson's death. Word came that Jean Harlow had suddenly died and at that very moment Jerry Hoffman, of the Los Angeles Examiner, was interviewing her.

* * *

Snapshots of Hollywood:

LIONEL BARRYMORE'S 25th year in the movies to be celebrated in proper style by MGM; JOSEPH SCHENCK flying in from New York for a big conference; BOB COBB placing a bronze plaque on the cafe table formerly occupied by the late WILSON MIZNER; MRS. KIM HOLLINS, WILSON'S niece, arriving here to spend the week-end with JESSICA and DICK BARTHELMESS.

JANET GAYNOR trying to recover from her recent illness by staying in bed half a day in Honolulu; GEORGE RAFT who played opposite JOAN BENNETT in "She Couldn't Take It." paying her a visit at the Fox Studios; ESDEL FORD, his wife and two children, being taken on a personally conducted tour of WARNER BROTHERS Studio; Joe E. who, by the way, is turning down his personal appearance engagement, escorting the FORDS around the studio.

POSTMASTER JAMES FARLEY, the luncheon guest of JACK WARNER; MARLENE DIETRICH and her next director, FRANK BORZAGE, talking over things at a cafe; STU ERWIN writing a book about Hollywood called "I Could Write a Book"; Well, so could most of us. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Musical at Olympia

Warner Brothers' sparkling musical romance, "Broadway Gondolier," with Dick Powell and Joan Blondell as stars, takes over the screen on the new program tomorrow at the Washington Street Olympia.

In the supporting cast are Adolphe Menjou, Louise Fazenda, William Gargan, Ted Fiorito and his band, and the Four Mills Brothers.

The same program offers W. C. Fields in "The Man on the Flying Trapeze."

Ginger and Fred Again

"Top Hat" Comes to Keith's Sunday

"Top Hat," bringing Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire to the screen for the fourth time as dancing partners, opens at the Keith Memorial Sunday.

With a score of new melodies and lyrics by Irving Berlin, and the introduction of the new dance sensation, "The Piccolino," "Top Hat" is already being hailed as another big triumph for the attractive stars and for RKO Radio Pictures.

There is a gay romance for a story, starting off in London and ending up at the Lido, as a background for the screen's most popular dancing stars.

The Berlin tunes include "The Piccolino," "Cheek to Cheek," "Isn't It a Lovely Day" and other songs that are already radio and dance favorites.

Featured in the cast are Edward Everett Horton, Helen Broderick, Eric Rhodes and Eric Blore, all of whom, with the exception of Miss Broderick, appeared in "The Gay Divorcee."

The film story is based on the European play, "The Girl Who Dared."

Rogers' Greatest

Mississippi Film Triumph For Beloved Will

By JOYCE DANA

"A great star's greatest story," Hollywood calls "Steamboat Round the Bend."

But Will Rogers wrote finis to his own greatest story. While the news reels still show mute evidence of his tragic death, his admirers thronged the Paramount and Fenway yesterday to see him in the last picture he made while the cameras ground on a movie set.

No idle curiosity, no belated appreciation, brought them there. It's simply another tribute to a very gallant gentleman, whose humor, honesty and humanity made this world a happier place

In "Steamboat Round the Bend" you'll find Will as you will want to remember him.

* * *

Shooing the chickens out of the cabin of the old and rickety stern-wheeler, "The Claremore Queen," Will waits for his nephew, Duke, to pilot her up and down the Mississippi.

But Duke has killed a man in a quarrel over pretty Fleety Belle, a frightened little girl from the swamp lands. Hiding his heart-ache, Will takes the boy to Sheriff Rufe Jetters, confident that, since the killing was simply self-defence, justice will prevail, even though "the hangin' judge" is sitting in the county court.

Duke is condemned to the gallows, unless Will and Fletty Belle can raise the $500 needed for an appeal and find the self-styled and hirsute "New Moses," an itinerant evangelist who witnessed the crime

Eventually they do both. It requires a screamingly funny wax museum, an even funnier drunken handyman, Irvin Cobb as the fat and friendly rival captain of the "Pride of Puducah," a bit of skillful rope-throwing and a thrilling race down the river to get to the happy ending.

* * *

You'll like watching the New Moses piling wax dummies and jugs of rum into the failing boilers of "The Claremore Queen." You'll laugh at the laconic calliope-pounding Stepin Fetchit (if you can understand him). And you'll find John McGuire and Anne Shirley (a barefoot gal from the badlands with a manicure) likeable as the young romantics.

But most of all you'll like Will Rogers. It's his picture. You'll leave him peaceful and happy, on the after deck of "The Claremore Queen." And you'll be glad and proud to have seen him again.

The remainder of the program is given over to "Without Regret," a film loosely adapted from thee Roland Pertwee-Harold Dearden play, "Interference."

It's a highly melodramatic affair, with E[illegible]a Landi, Paul Cavanagh, Kent Taylor and Frances Drake as principals.

Tom Brown At Met

Tom Brown, one of Hollywood's most attractive juveniles, makes a single performance on the stage of the Metropolitan Theater tonight.

Brown has one of the leading roles in Paramount's "Annapolis Farewell," story of the United States Naval Academy, now featured on the Metropolitan screen.

He appears in person preceding the last showing tonight at 9 o'clock.

RED HORRORS TOLD

CHILD BEGGAR GANGS ROAM STREETS, TAWDUL WRITES

Herewith is the thirteenth of a series of revealing articles by Adam J. Tawdul, a lifelong Communist, who went from the United States to Russia to occupy an important engineering position under the Soviet government and who now tells vividly what he found there.

ARTICLE THIRTEEN

By ADAM J. TAWDUL

In the big cities homeless children are organized in gangs. They have their leaders (or czars) and their codes. They control certain areas and engage in fierce battles on account of these fields of exploitation.

In Moscow, I had occasion last year to become acquainted with one such "czar" of the homeless. For two weeks I occupied alone the apartment of Tolmachev, an important Kharkov Communist.

One evening, upon returning to the apartment, I found a boy of about 16 on the stairway. I thought I had caught a little thief and dragged him inside to see if anything had been taken from my quarters.

Adam J. Tawdul

The struggling lad assured me that he was not a thief, he was a "bezprizorny," a homeless child, and that he had been living in the apartment house for months.

To convince me, he told me the exact date of my arrival in Moscow, the hours of my departure and return each day, and other details.

I fed him, gave him some money, and offered him a bed in the apartment. The latter he declined.

We became friends. He divulged his quarters to me under the roof. We exchanged several visits. The name of the lad was Kiril Tchukin.

Child Wife

He lived in the loft with his "wife" Shura—a thin little girl who looked no more than 11 but who claimed to be 16. She was very well dressed, according to Soviet standards. The couple shared their shelter with an "adjutant" of the leader, a boy of about 14 called Mishka.

There was even some furniture in the attic. There was a curtain made from sacks to divide the loft into two rooms.

I was surprised to find in the place that acme of Soviet luxury—a little kerosene stove.

Kiril, a robust, blue-eyed youngster, told me the story of his life. He was the son of a workingman in Sebastopol, the Crimea. His parents were killed by a shell during the civil war. He was left with his grandmother.

When she died, he joined the homeless army, was caught many times by the Soviet police and sent off to government homes.

He hated these institutions with a staggering hatred.

He lived for years by begging alms and petty thievery. He learned to drink and to play cards. He even worked—occasionally.

In 1930 a peasant whom he had helped in the village was on the point of adopting him and giving him a home.

Then came the collectivization drive.

The peasant was ruined. The southern provinces were afflicted with famine.

In the spring of 1932 he started his migration northward and finally reached Moscow in the summer of 1933.

Having a wealth of experience, Kiril established himself in the best residential section of Moscow and engaged in a series of battles with his competitors.

His prowess was finally recognized and he was elected, in his own words, "czar" of the district.

It was in Moscow Kiril met his "wife" Shura. He ruled with an iron hand. His gang consisted of more than a hundred homeless children.

They were on guard against any invasion of Kiril's domain by outside waifs.

Kiril assured me no stealing was tolerated in his district. The children were organized merely as a means of keeping the peace with the janitors and the local police.

Beg to Live

Members of his gang lived only by begging. And they lived well except in the winter, as the residents were all high functionaries.

Kiril explained to me the system of signals which he had for emergencies. His gang knew of everything that was going on in the district.

His greatest complaint was against the competition of the peasants from the famine provinces who begged for bread or alms in the streets of his "kingdom."

There was a pathetic note in Kiril's voice when we parted. Even his "privileged" gang, operating in what is perhaps the wealthiest ward in all of Russia, was living in dread of a sudden G. P. U. raid.

Tens of thousands of the less fortunate homeless children infesting Moscow live in conditions which are simply heart-rending.

Many times in Russia I observed the horrors of daily life and developed the belief that the limit had been reached, that human existence would be impossible if things got worse.

Mercy Triumphs

And then I saw and looked into the life of the homeless children, and was convinced that there are no limits to human suffering.

And yet human nobility is also inexhaustible. The people who give to the hungry waifs are hungry themselves. And there are many who know that these little street wolves are capable of murdering their benefactors in the dark.

Yet the human heart responds to the cry for help.

Soviet Russia taught me that endless as human depravity may be, the soul of man is equally boundless.

I did not marvel so much at the crimes and the horrors I observed in my native Russia as much as I marveled at the survival of the finer feelings in the hearts of the people.

In spite of the inhuman, the merciless deeds committed daily by the Stalinist dictatorship, love and mercy have not been extinguished in the soul of Russia.

The millions of homeless children who do survive, despite the policies of the Soviet government, owe their lives to the spring of human kindness which never runs dry.

Lament of Athletic Youth: Sport Kids' Dilemma

I AM A TOUGH YOUNG MONKEY from the twilight fringe of Boston, raised under cart wheels horses' hocks and on the cobblestone playgrounds.

Austen Lake

Big and rugged for my age, I am, and handy with my fists. Maybe, if the times were right, I would follow the fight game and work myself up through the dance hall boxing clubs to fame, wealth, with my picture on the sport pages.

Suppose I want to box! Where am I going to train, now that the cellar and store-room gymnasiums are closed and deserted? And where are the small-time, four-bit fight clubs to give me a trial booking and furnish a doctor to sew me up when the flap of my lip comes loose or the saddle of my nose is smashed?

High license fees, taxes and gypsy managers have put the small promoters out of business, and even the big fellows are hanging by their finger nails hoping for a turn in the tide, which may never come now that we young bucks have become too soft for the fight game and the accident rate is too high for the thin profits.

Why should I risk coming up with the buck jumps and spend- [illegible] later days tap, tapping with a cane, drooling, slack-lipped [illegible], when I can make $100 a week selling number pool tick[illegible] my cut off the top?

[illegible] No fight for me while I can pick up smart [illegible] and while fight managers crawl out of the walls [illegible] clubs and cave-of-the-wind dives, men who can remove your skin without unbuttoning your coat.

Even the amateur clubs, where a lad could once learn the [illegible] art, can be counted on your thumbs.

Not for me or for the others, either, as long as the public is [illegible] up its pockets because of bad fights, the managers are [illegible] clubs for impossible purses and the kids, who might [illegible]ters, are leaning to lighter work.

[illegible] while I can knock off $100 a week selling [illegible]l tickets with my cut off the top.

The [illegible] Footballer's Tale

I AM A BOSTON HIGH SCHOOL football star going into my senior year. Normally I would graduate in 1936 and then enter one of the better universities to study engineering. I am not afraid of work and am willing to earn my way as a buss boy in a lunch room or be nurse to a dormitory furnace.

But lately I have had so many offers from fresh water colleges which need a good triple threat fullback, that I will not have [illegible] and will get all expenses with a liberal drawing account.

[illegible]e just returned from a visit to Tomaine University, in [illegible]psteak, N. C., on a lavish expense check drawn to the Tomaine [illegible]A., where the graduate manager, who doubles as regis[illegible] [illegible]ed me the campus.

[illegible] was a beautiful spot, with lavish architectural palaces, built from an endowment left by Cyrus Tomaine, the copper king, [illegible] promise to change the title of Old Silvertop to perpetuate his family name.

Being farsighted men, the trustees set a considerable sum aside for football promotion on the idea that there is no advertising like a winning football team.

"The entrance requirements at Tomaine are pretty stiff," the graduate manager told me, "but you have thick thighs and broad shoulders and come well-recommended through the Boston sport pages.

"So we will waive examinations and credits in your case and start you in the sophomore class, so you will be eligible for the varsity this fall. This is because you are a worthy lad."

I have a remorseful twinge at not being able to study engineering, as I had planned. I will have to take courses in plumbing, chair-caning and typewriting. But then I will not have to work, and will be the University's guest in a three-room suite, with a fat drawing account . . . UNLESS I FAIL TO MAKE THE VARSITY.

Twilight Leaguer's Complaint

I AM A TWILIGHT LEAGUE ball player from the outer edges of Boston, playing the game during supper hours and after my [illegible]livering for a chain grocery.

I can hit, run and field with the best of them and am ripe for [illegible] league job in some class B or D league. Sometimes, on a holiday, I go out to Fenway Park and work out with Hugh Duffy's rookie school.

Hughie likes my looks and has written a sheaf of letters to leaky roof leagues about the country, asking them to give me a trial.

But most of the teams do not even answer Hughie's letters, and the others say bluntly they are not interested in young players, but prefer the old castoffs from the major leagues who come with ready made reputations and have a strong customer appeal.

There are only a few minor leagues nowadays, where there [illegible] be 30 or 40, and when a smart youngster could land a job [illegible] earn a living wage.

There were not enough castoff major leaguers to go around [illegible], and no ex-leaguers tramping the rail ties with their uniform [illegible] in their hands, sleeping in haystacks and hoping to land a [illegible] job for breakfast and cigaret money.

I have even offered to pay my own traveling and hotel expenses if a minor league club would give me a trial. But they say they are full up, and even if I was another Bill Terry or Frankie Frisch, they would not be able to use me, because they have already lost their trunks and spare clothes for unpaid board bills and owe so much back wages that their players don't dare quit.

So, when the twilight season closes next month, I will hang up my mitt and kiss the game goodbye.

I might have been another Jimmy Foxx or Lou Gehrig. I will never know. But then there are a half million other kids around the land who will never know about themselves either.

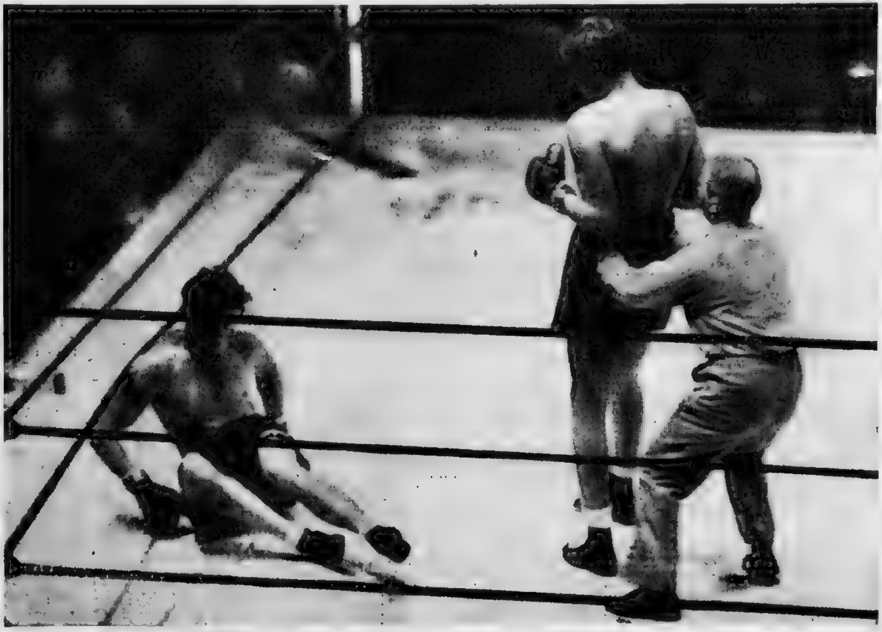
The Magic Eye camera sees the important part of the Buddy Baer conquest of Jack Doyle, "Irish Nightingale." Buddy catches Doyle with a terrific left hook to the chin. Down, down, down goes Doyle to the canvas after two minutes and 38 seconds of the first round of the schedu'ed six-round go, in the New York Garden. The one-round affair moved Buddy up in the heavyweight ring scene.



"Where am I" seems to be Jack Doyle's theme as he sits on the canvas after being battered by Buddy Baer, brother of ex-champ Max Baer. Referee Billy Kavanaugh grabs Baer to send him to neutral corner. Doyle arose, but the referee gave Buddy the award on technical knockout.

Sandy Burr Country Club, Aug. 30—Coming from far behind with a sparkling surge, Bob Ryan of the home club defeated Phillip Friel, Woburn, on the 19th hole in a third round match in the William Randolph Hearst Junior Golf championship here this morning.

Rain hampered the great match, which was featured by Ryan's comeback after being three down at the 15th. He won the 15th, 16th and 17th to even the match, halved the 18th and finally won out when he canned a 12-foot putt for a birdie four on the 19th.

Leslie Douty, Green Hill, turned in a sub-par 71 in downing little Johnny Waloshyn, Walpole, 2 and 1. Waloshyn, hampered by the steady rain, turned in a fine card, posting 76 for the 18 holes.

Wilfred Wedge, hard-hitting Arlmont boy, downed Joseph Burke, Wildwood, 4 and 3, after getting a 1-up advantage at the turn. He started home, even par for the first six holes and this streak eliminated Burke.

Mike Kusiak, poker-faced golf star from the North Shore Country Club, turned in an upset victory when he downed the medalist, Frank Walsh, Walpole, 6 and 5.

Walsh played in bad luck today and was laid stymies on the fourth, fifth and sixth holes in one stretch of bad luck, and dropped the fifth and sixth with a pair of fives.

The Walpole star lost the first hole, but went one up when he won the second and fourth. Starting with the fifth hole he lost five in a row as Kusiak's putter became hot.

Stuart Wins

They halved the 11th with regulation fives, but the North Shore boy closed out the match with a one-putt green on the 12th and a par three on the 13th. Kusiak was 38 to the turn and started home 3—5—4—3, while Walsh used up 42 strokes on the out-going nine.

Everett Stuart, Mount Pleasant youngster, gave a great exhibition of courage in coming from behind on the incoming nine to defeat Frank Janusas, of Minute Man, 2 and 1.

Stuart was two down with six holes to go on the 12th when he staged a rally which won him four of the next six holes to close out the match. He almost holed out on the short 13th when his tee shot rolled to within two feet of the pin.

He won the 14th to even up the match when Janusas three-putted the green. They halved the 15th with fours, both one-putting the green and Stuart came through with a pair of fives on the 16th and 17th, while Janusas could only get sixes.

Curran Bows

Johnny McCann, Thorny Lea, took an early lead in his match with Leonard Curran, Weston, and coasted home to win 4 and 3. Johnny was two up at the turn, posting a 38 for the outward journey and he won the 12th, 13th and 14th on the trip home

Curran attempted to stage a rally, starting at the long 11th where he got a birdie four but McCann came back with his three-hole streak to win the match.

In another upset, Bill Martin, invader from Massasoit, R. I., downed

WES FERRELL PROMISES 25 VICTORIES

Mr. Boston

Lou Challenges McCoy

By LOU BROUILLARD

DEAR MR. BOSTON:

I have sat calmly in my corner and faced two boxing champions of the world.

On each occasion I walked out and paraded to victory. Yet winning two world ring championships seems very simple, now that I am sitting in your corner with a typewriter in front of me.

FOR ONCE I am worried, but if you will accept this in sincerity and not accuse me of blowing off steam I think I can struggle through the column with a few choice remarks for my Dear Friend, Al McCoy.

Lou Brouillard

There is no place in the world I would rather box than Boston. I won the welterweight champion from Jack Thompson here, and I defended the middleweight championship here agains Vince Dundee after winning it in New York from Ben Jeby.

I always fought in Boston whenever the opportunity presented itself. I would rather box before fans of this section than in New York, Chicago or California, where purses are supposed to be much higher than you can get here.

That is why I am saying right here and now that I'll box Al McCoy in Boston. I am tired of his hullabaloo about how good he is and how every fighter fears him.

McCoy is a setup for me. I'll spot him five rounds the best of it and knock him out in the sixth.

CAN LICK LOUIS

I AM ENTITLED to ignore McCoy should I care to. I have been named the outstanding middleweight title contender in the country.

This also goes for the light-heavyweight division. I am not boasting. I am quoting the various boxing commissions throughout the country.

I am sincere, too, when I say I would like to box Joe Louis. I know I could beat him in a short bout.

AL McCOY

There has been a cry from McCoy's corner because I have demanded the lion's share of the purse. Well, I believe I am entitled to it. After all, who is McCoy? Who has he licked?

Since I defeated Young Corbett on the Coast I have received offers from every part of the country. New York wants me and is trying to angle Teddy Yarosz into defending his championship.

I have received offers from Europe. One included a match with Marcel Thil, whom they recognize as champion over there. I am still waiting for official word of this match.

Yet, if the fans of Boston want me to box McCoy I am ready and willing. And, between us, it would be a great pleasure.

I have never let an opponent get under my skin, but I must admit there would be a great deal of personal pleasure in giving Mr. McCoy a sound thumping.

COME ON, RIP

I have already notified Rip Valenti, matchmaker for the Goodwin A. C., to get the best available opponent for me should McCoy take his bicycle back to Maine. Let's get going on the return of the boxing game in Boston.

There is no reason why boxing should be in such a sad condition here. I am ready and willing to do my part.

If a fight between myself and McCoy will turn the trick, then let Rip Valenti draw up the papers, I'm ready with my signature.

If I have used the word "I" too often, please forgive me. But, as I said before, I mean every word of it.

P. S.—Regards from the Missus and the kids.

A'S His 20th VICTIM

MANY RECORDS AT MERCY

By Joe Cashman

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 30—"I'll equal my top mark of 25 victories, maybe better it, before this race is over," boasted Wesley Cheek Ferrell as he strutted about at breakfast time today.

It would be easy enough to laugh at the Sox ace's claim, since the season has only a month to go and he isn't likely to make many, if any more than six starts the rest of the way.

At the same time, it would seem the height of foolishness to wager anything against the temperamental Tar-Heel making good his boast, after the way he has lived up to other extraordinary promises this year.

OLD HABIT

Before the campaign opened, he predicted he'd own 20 victories before Labor Day. Few, indeed, thought he had a chance. It was the consensus that his days of real pitching greatness were over.

A week ago he made another claim that everybody scoffed at.

Severely straining his ankle in Detroit, he was told by physicians he'd be unable to stand on the hill again before Labor Day. He smiled and announced he'd be out there winning again in a week.

And, exactly one week to the day later, there was Wesley killing both birds with the same stone, as it were, in the opener of the current two-game series with the Athletics.

Leading the pitching parade is an old Ferrell custom.

He made his bow in fast company by becoming the first rookie ever to win 20 games in his first full season. He kept right on until he had become the first flinger ever to win 20 or more games in each of his first four years.

A lame arm, expected to ruin him, held him down to 11 and 14 victories, respectively, the past two seasons, but now he's again back in the 20-win class for the fifth time.

He's only 27 years old. He's improving all the time because he gets smarter in every start. He's already piled up close to 150 victories. He should be an ace for seven or eight years more.

In other words he stands a great chance of shattering most American League pitching records. And he glibly talks about doing it. He's that cocky.

Not since 1923, when Howard Ehmke won 20 games, have the Sox had a pitcher who gained as many verdicts as has Ferrell this year. The only other Boston pitcher to win 20 in the past 17 years or more is Ben Cantwell who reached the mark two seasons back.

Only twice was Wes in trouble in Thursdays' tilt.

His first pitch of the game was cracked for a double by Finney. A moment later, Bob Johnson singled and the A's were leading.

TWO HOMERS

Immediately, however, he settled down and was never in serious danger again except in the fifth, when the Macks bunched three hits for their second and final tally.

Manager Joe Cronin tied the score when he hit a home run off Johnny Marcum in the fourth. "Dusty" Cooke came through with a circuit drive in the same frame to put the Fenway flock in the lead.

Roy Johnson, who collected a triple, double, single and walk, rescued two more markers with his three-bagger in the fifth.

In the eighth, Cooke was passed purposely, filling the bases, to bring up Werber. Billy made his first hit since returning to action, and two more runs came racing home.

And Wesley Cheek Ferrell began thinking of 25 wins or more.

THREE-IN-TWO DODGERS ON WAY

GIANTS GAIN ON CARDS

By Walter Kiley

A bit of breathing spell is afforded the battered Braves this afternoon as they await the Brooklyn Dodgers, who arrive in town this evening for a Saturday single game and a Sabbath doubleheader.

The eBravees wind up their last long home stay of the season on Sunday, swinging off on a Western jaunt that evening to be gone almost a month.

They don't appear at the Wigwam again until the last week of the year, bringing their unfruitful campaign to a close with the Giants.

The Red Sox return home to Boston's loving arms on the holiday, a double-header with the Senators making a fine Labor Day attraction.

Both the Chicago Cubs and the New York Giants rest this afternoon, while the pace setting St. Louis Cards take another fling at the hard hitting Pittsburgh Pirates who put a crimp in their short lead with a 5 to 1 victory over the Frisch-men yesterday.

As matters now stand, the Carads are out front of the Giants by a game and one half with the Cubs just one game back of the New Yorkers and closely pressing.

GIANTS SET

The Cubs looked and acted like pennant winners during their Boston three game visit. They lost the opener 2 to 1, when Ben Cantwell delivered a pitching epic and Wally Berger delivered a telling four ply wallop which turned a tie into victory.

But they came through with flying colors in the second and third games under wraps, skillful pitching by Lon Werneke and Billy French turning the trick in handy fashion.

The return of Gabby Hartnett to the catching berth seemed to add fire to Charlie Grim-coached team.

Despite a still tender ankle, the Millville veteran rendered an excelent account of his one day stewardship with a homer and two singles which were but three of 16 hits garnered as they blasted Frankhouse, MacFayden and Betts for an 8 to 2 victory.

The Cubs have a two-game series with the Pirates which opens tomorrow and closes on Sunday. The latter have the habit of putting a serious crimp in pennant aspiring teams, as witness their unkind treatment of the Giants and Cards.

The Giants would seem to have a bit the better of the going in the immediate future, meeting the Phillies in a four-game series

Expect McNamara To Resign

The status of Dinny McNamara as head football coach at Boston College was still unchanged this morning, though his resignation was expected at the Heights.

Ill health probably will prompt the popular young coach to resign although Graduate Manager John P. Curley denies it.

Meanwhile the team is practicing twice daily under Harry Downs, line coach, and Bill Ormsby, end coach.

Captain Joe O'Brien, end from Hyde Park, will be unable to practice for a week, owing to an injured finger received in an automobile accident recently.

He is with the squad every day, however.

GIANTS, AHOY!

Gain on Cards

New York, Aug. 30 (US)—With Dick Bartell setting the pace with a home run and three singles, New York's slipping Giants stopped their losing ways here long enough to defeat the Dodgers, 7 to 5, and picked up a full game on the league-leading Cardinals. The win, coupled with a setback for the Cards, put the Giants within a game and a half of first place.

Boxing Results

North Adams—Werther Arcelli, Boston welterweight, stopped Johnny Catalano, Providence, in sixth round of scheduled 10. Sal Sanata, Holyoke, and Joe Ricciutti, Boston, drew, eight rounds.

New York—Mickey Walker, 168, Rumson, N. J., knocked out Thys Menger, 166, Paterson, N. J., in second round of scheduled 10.

New Haven—Steve Carr, 160, Meriden, Ct., defeated Nathan Mann, 174, New York, eight rounds.

New York—Buddy Baer, 238¼, stopped Jack Doyle, 204, Ireland, in first round of scheduled six. Bout stopped by referee. John Anderson, 171¼, Sweden, outpointed Tony Celli, 177¼, Leominster, Mass., six rounds. Eddie Mader, 187½, outslugged Terry Mitchell, 184¾, Somerville, Mass. Charlie Belanger, 178, Canada, outpointed One Punch Williams, 189¼, Philadelphia, six rounds.

DOYLE STOPPED IN FIRST BY BUDDY

BRIDE Breaks DOWN

11,547 PAY $25,950

By Ed Frayne
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

New York, Aug. 30—The long-awaited answer to the query "can Jack Doyle take it," was furnished in Madison Square Garden by Buddy Baer, who silenced the Irish Thrush in 2 minutes and 38 seconds.

Doyle, out-weighed by 34 pounds, hit the deck twice, the last time from a left hook and a right cross to the jaw. At the count of 7, Jack arose dazed and helpless and Referee Billy Cavanaugh ordered Baer to cease firing.

Baer really delivered a double knockout. Judith Allen, motion picture bride of the former Irish guardsman, was prostrated by the catastrophe and was led from the ringside weeping.

Doyle did not fully recover until after he was led from the ring. His chief second, Dan Morgan, administered smelling salts after Jack had been dragged to his corner and the Celt perked up and wanted to go out for another round.

Curiosity was the motive that put 11,547 customers into the Garden, and they paid a gross of $25,950 to see Baer chill his opponent with his first good punch and finish him in the same time represented by his weight. Buddy scaled 238¼, Doyle 204½.

They mixed it in the center of the ring, and Doyle rocked Buddy with a right to the head. He then hooked his left to the head.

Buddy looked bewildered but did not seem to be hurt. He kept reaching for Jack, who went into his crouch, then straightened up again and clinched.

[illegible] Doyle, famous crooner, who was stopped in less than one round by young Buddy Baer.

DOYLE IN FOG

Baer was swinging wildly when they separated, but one of his truant rights caught his black-haired opponent on the jaw.

Doyle staggered back but Baer caught him with a left hook and sat him down for a count of five.

Doyle was in a fog when he arose. His arms were down as he backed across the ring. Buddy pursued and shot a long left hook to the head.

As Doyle was toppling his bride cried out "Oh, no," covered her face with her hands and burst into tears.

Before Jack could hit the deck again Baer accelerated his fall with a right hand smash to the jaw that caused the Irish tenor to connect with the canvas with great violence.

He fell on his back but struggled up at seven to be succored by the referee.

Ed Don George, former world heavyweight wrestling champion, inspects the register he signed at the Waltham C. C., where he is training. William Stokes, building inspector for the city of Waltham, says George is a "public nuisance" and can't train at the Waltham C. C. and has also taken action against the Redskins, pro eleven, training at the same place. With George, above, are John Lawless and Harold Durkin, owners of the Country Club, who have objected to Stokes' action and are defending George and the Redskins.

The citizens of Waltham, or at least some of them, do not like the idea of crowds flocking out to watch a professional team practice . . . Protests have been made to the city officials but whether the irate citizens will be catered to or not remains to be seen . . . They are also objecting to Ed Don George training there.

PERRY Rules Despite CRITICS

TILDEN PASSES JUDGMENT

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 30—We'd always taken it for granted that Fred Perry, on the strength of unbroken conquests all over the world for the past three years, was the kingpin of the tennis amateurs.

But you'd never have known that he was the player nobody could extend, let alone beat, by the comments the experts were making out at Forest Hills today, as the cocky Englishman started the defense of the American championship he has held for the last two years.

"Perry hits every one of his shots wrong," was the emphatic criticism of Big Bill Tilden, once the champion of champions himself.

"He's only a retriever, a bigger edition of Bitsy Grant," chimed in Vinnie Richards.

"Speed of shot, not of foot, will beat him."

Sam Hardy, former American Davis Cup captain, had something to say, too.

"Fred's backhand is very unorthodox," was the veteran's contribution.

"A good volleyer can beat him easily."

Little to Fear

And William Pategn, who captained America's Davis Cup forces down in Mexico this year, echoed Hardy's sentiments, insisting that a properly executed net attack could encompass the downfall of the all-conquering Britisher.

Tilden admitted however, that despite his faults Perry had little to fear from the 63 survivors who are still left in the Forest Hills field with him.

"Fred's the best-worst player I've ever seen, or else the worst-best. I don't know which," Big Bill puzzled.

"He hits every one of his shots wrong," Tilden continued, "yet he keeps right on winning. So he must be good.

"It's his marvelous wrist action and his keen eye that do it. If I cramped my forehand the way Fred frequently does, I'd be terrible, even though I've played as much tennis as I have. But Perry gets away with it because his wrist is so amazingly supple."

Big Bill couldn't see any of the players in Perry's half of the draw, Parker, Shields, Maier, Allison or Sutter, making any trouble for the Britisher, and altogether he conceded Budge a chance to make a good showing in the final, picked the Englishman to whip the youthful Californian in the titular round.

Jacobs to Win

Large William also picked Helen Jacobs to hold onto her women's crown. For all her defeat by Katherine Stammers in the Wightman Cup matches, Tilden was certain she would turn the tables on John Bull's sprightly daughter if they met in the finals. And he wasn't sure that Kay could get past Mrs Sarah Fabyan in the semis

BEARS WIN, 5-0 BEFORE 90,000

COLLEGIANS OUTCLASSED

By Universal Service

Soldier Field, Chicago, Aug. 30—A crowd of 90,000 watched the Chicago Bears professional football team, world champions in 1933, defeat the College All-Stars here by the scant margin of 5 to 0.

The professionals scored their first points in the opening period after a long drive from the Collegians' 46-yard line when Jack Manders place-kicked from the 27-yard marker.

The Bears' second scoring was in the final period when Bill Shepherd, left halfback of the all stars, went back to punt from behind his own goal line.

The pass was high, however, and he fumbled, recovering behind the goal line to produce a safety giving the Bears an additional two points.

The Collegians were generally outclassed in the tilt but put up a real threat in the final period. Then they started their first sustained drive, which carried them from their own 41 yard line to the Bears' seven-yard marker

The Collegians callapsed, however, as they attempted a touchdown

Manders, Feathers, Hewitt and Masterson of the pros proved masters of the Collegians, such as Shepherd, Kostka, Munjas and Fuqua

Feathers electrified the huge crowd with long runs.

Release 'Sponge' Men at Saratoga

By Associated Press

Saratoga Spring, N. Y. Aug. 30—Four Long Island men questioned by police and representatives of the state racing commission about the finding of silk sponges and Chinese sticks in an automobile here were freed today.

The finding of the sponges led law officers to check on the possibility that horse "sponging"—the practice of pushing small sponges up a horse's nostrils to interfere with its breathing—had been planned

MOVIES FOR DOYLE SURELY NOT THE RING

BUDDY STOPS HIM PRONTO

Gy BILL CORUM

New York, Aug. 30—A little bit of Jerusalem fell from out the sky and landed plump on the chin of Jack (Mother Machree) Doyle, so today Jacob (My Buddy) Baer is heavyweight baritone champion of the world.

Jack (Mother Machree) came into the ring looking like a guy on his way to the electric chair for a shave and left it looking relieved after 2 minutes and 38 seconds of fighting in the first round.

What had been billed as a duet for the singing championship between the two sweetest voiced big boys you ever listened to, turned out to be little more than a solo.

Doyle did land two hard rights to the jaw that made Baer's eyes blink, but it was only an Irishman's dream.

When Buddy came back off the handsome Hibernian's Sunday socks to outshove and outslug him, it was apparent to all that the Irish Caruso would wind up flat before the second chorus was reached.

JUDITH FAINTS

Really it was a mismatch from the start, and it wouldn't surprise me if Baer can't even outsing him, though he will never go as good in the movies.

With a pull of two inches in heigth, 5 in reach and 34 pounds in weight, Jacob (My Buddy) would have had to be pretty bad to lose.

Doyle showed courage enough, a fair right, a perfect profile, and a wavy mop of black hair. Aside from that he'd better stay in pictures.

Judith Allen, Jack (Mother MaChree's) motion picture bride, collapsed in her ringside seat back of his corner when Referee Billy Cavanaugh stepped in and stopped the bout. But her spouse had beaten her to it. He collapsed first. It's a husband's privilege.

Buddy sent him crashing down under a hard right as the round reached the two-minute mark, but Jack bounced up as gaily as a humming bird without waiting for a count.

It was different the next time, when Jacobs slapped him over with a low left followed by what might have been the convincer as he was going down.

PRELIMS GOOD

Jack's head hit the back of the canvas with a thud and it looked like Kathleen Mavourneen. That is, it might have been for years or it might have been forever. But the 'andsome one was made of stern enough stuff to stagger to his feet.

He was plainly helpless, however, and urged by the press rows, the ref. stepped in and called it an evening before the big fellow had a chance to land the finishing sockdologer.

Baer would have lost the first round on a foul, if he hadn't won the fight with a knockout, as he dropped one far below the belt early in the round.

The preliminary bouts were exciting and the crowd of 11,547 that paid $25,000 to see the cauliflowers return to cauliflower court for another season got a good run for its money

Also Joe Louis, our Katie's favorite fighting man, got a rousing hand. Throw out the others, this brown boy is the one who can really fight.

$18,000 Per Day Purse AT SALEM, N. H.

By the Associated Press

Purses totaling more than $125,000—an average of more than $18,000 a day—will be offered during the 12-day meeting opening at Rockingham Park, September 16. There will be four stake races with a value of $5000 each and one worth $7500.

Races for maiden two-year-olds are considered the hardest of all to beat, but the form players selected the winner from among 18 such youngsters at Saratoga yesterday

Trouper, a gelded son of Sun Flag, won by three lengths, paying his backers, 13 to 5.

Twice during the Lincoln Field meeting the McCown family has collaborated in a victory. Mrs. Edward McCown's brown-eyed Pat, trained by her husband and ridden by her son, Darrell, won the feature event yesterday, repeating a triumph early in the meeting.

TIGERS Coining MONEY

ATTENDANCE MARKS FALL

By Universal Service

New York, Aug. 30—With a second straight American League pennant virtually conceded to Mickey Cochrane and his spirited Tigers, and with the possibility that those same Tigers may win for Detroit the city's first world championship, Detroit has today become the major leagues' "hottest" baseball city.

The 1,028,000 fans who flocked to Navin field to see the Tigers play thus far this season, shattering all local season records, is direct evidence that Detroit rates with the best of them in backing a colorful, fighting team.

The Navin Field turnstiles have clicked to the merry tune of an average of 25,000 fans per day from Aug 17, to Aug. 28, the greatest demonstration of the popularity of winning baseball that has been seen in the majors for quite some time.

A total of 296,000 witnessed the twelve days of play during which the Tigers cemented themselves on top of the American League to lead the fading Yankees by a full nine games.

The figures tell only half the story. Navin Field, with a seating capacity of approximately 30,000, is getting much too small to hold those pennant-mad Tiger fans.

From 1910 to 1934, 25 long, lean years, the Tiger fans waited for a taste of victory in the junior loop.

Hughie "Ee-Yah" Jennings had brought them three straight flags in 1907, 1908 and 1909, but after that came famine, and there wasn't much cause for worry about satisfying all seating demands.

Dark-haired Mickey Cochrane changed all that, however. He took over the Tigers last year, put a fighting spirit into a club that hadn't finished in the first division for six straight years, and landed them on top in his first year as manager.

FANS RALLY

They called the amazing feat a miracle, something that couldn't happen again, but Mickey is fast proving that those Tigers of last year have lost neither claws nor teeth.

Detroit fans have more than shown their appreciation for the rejuvenation of the Tiger baseball fortunes.

A glance at the attendance figures for the record-shattering 12 days (and thousands were turned away on some of those afternoons) tells a story of popularity that has rarely been equalled.

On only two of those days were the figures below 20,000. The figures:

Aug. 17—21,000.
Aug. 18—39,000 (3000 short of the all-time record set six years ago).
Aug. 19—30,000.
Aug. 20 28,000.
Aug. 21—25,000.
Aug. 22—11,000.
Aug. 23—10,000.
Aug. 24—22,000.
Aug. 25—30,000.
Aug. 26—26,000.
Aug. 27—32,000.
Aug. 28—20,000.
Total 296,000.

U. S. Trio Leads

Montreal, Aug. 30—The second 18-hole round of the Canadian open championship started this morning with three U. S. pros., Tony Manero, Gene Kunes and Jimmy Hines, tied for the lead with par 70's.

SKEET LEADER

OLIVER MITCHELL OF NATICK

Solon, O., Aug. 30—A field of 114 of the nation's outstanding skeet shooters started the second of their three-day competition here this morning for the national all-bore championship.

Tied for the lead were Oliver Mitchell of Natick, Mass., captain of the all-American skeet team, and L. S. Pratt of Indianapolis, who holds practically all his state's records. Each broke 99 out of 100.

Mitchell won the Massachusetts title in 1932, '33 and '34 but dropped it this year to his brother Clarence, who won the national sub-small bore crown here last Tuesday.

The marksmen were to fire 100 more targets today and 50 tomorrow. High gun will take the championship.

THE BIG INNING FOREIGN TO GIANTS

THAT'S WHY THEY'RE TIRED

By Damon Runyon
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

New York, Aug. 30—The baseball diagnosticans are drawing up their chairs in solemn conference on the New York Giants.

They are wishful of finding out what's the matter with the Giants, now that our dream of some end of the world series of 1935 here in New York seems about to vanish in the river mist over St. Louis and the lake fog around Detroit.

But the diagnosticians seem unable to agree on the exact trouble with the Giants.

As far back as last March, when the Giants were training at Miami Beach, and seemed in the best of health, a veteran baseball diagnostician remarked to us that it struck him as a 9 o'clock baseball club which he apparently deemed a serious ailment.

He said the players went to bed early, and led a strangely methodical and orderly life off the field, and the same kind of life on the field.

He said they discharged their baseball functions in a modest, genteel manner, and that the boys were all mighty nice fellows.

RABBIT NEEDED

"But," he said, "I do not like 9 o'clock baseball clubs."

He meant, as we gathered, that he considered early retiring clubs of anaemic disposition, which was truly something of a shock to us, who have always been taught:

"Early to bed, and early to rise,
Makes men healthy, wealthy and wise."

Now comes another veteran diagnostician to shock us further, a learned man who has been tapping baseball clubs on the chest, and taking their blood pressure, and examining their eyeballs since Slim Sallee was a recruit

He is none other than good old Dr. Jack Doyle, the sage of Broadway, who confesses he has been watching the Giants practically all summer because his own physician has told him to lay off golf.

Golf had well nigh ruined Dr. Doyle's baseball practice when his medical man kindly led him away, but it appears that he is now back at the old stand, and his deductions after an examination of the Giants is that they are TIRED.

He says:

"Fans are accusing the Giants of quitting. Some folks say they are all in, and wonder why the Giants should tire where other clubs do not.

BIG INNING

"Here is the angle: They ARE tired. And the reason they are all in when other clubs are still full of zing, is that the Giants are not the kind of a club that can engage in sustained attacks.

"The Cardinals, the Cubs, and in fact all the other clubs have the knack of getting in the big inning frequently while the Giants NEVER do.

"The locals are one and two run makers. With the exception of one day recently when they made eight runs in the second inning, one has to go away back in the dope to find another big inning for them.

"Consequently they are all in when their games are finished.

"They are like a race horse which is whipped in each succeeding start in nose finishes.

"They are not quitters. They are a smart, game club. Their only shortcoming is the fact that they so seldom bat around in one stanza."

One thing about old Doctor Doyle, he always has a kind word for his patients.

War Looms In Minor Leagues

By Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 30 — Thomas J Hickey, president of the American Association, said today there would be no 'Little World Series" with the International League unless the International agreed to call its playoff winner the league champion

Hickey said association objections were based on the International League practice of staging a post-season playoff between the first four finishers and sending the survivors to meet the association pennant winner.

"We will not play gain unless they gree to desigute their playoff winner league champion. A 'Little World Series' between the and their playoff winner under present conditions is just a series of exhibition games which mean nothing."

Just Exhibition

"We played their playoffs winner the last two seasons and on neither occasion was their representative the team which won their pennant," Hickey said.

"We will not play again unless they agree to designate their playoff winner league champion. A 'little world series' between the American Association champion and their playoff winner under present conditions is just a series of exhibition games which mean nothing."

Hickey's statement came in the wake of a Buffalo, N. Y., report that a "little world series" would be staged if Buffalo or Montreal won the International League title.

VICAR IN 6TH WILSON'S BEST BET

Whopper Choice in 'Gansett 5th

By Dave Wilson

(Selections Made for Fast Track)

BEST BET—VICAR

Narragansett Park, Aug. 30—Hal Price Headley's Whopper, aptly named son of Pharamond 2d, will in this observer's opinion duplicate his Blackstone Valley triumph in the $5000 added Providence Handicap one mile and an eighth feature on a sparkling card of eight races here tomorrow afternoon.

Vicar, A. C. Compton's good cup horse, shapes up not only as the probable winner of the $1500 Taunton handicap, the day's secondary feature, but as the outstanding wagering proposition on the card

FIRST—ATMOSPHERE, DROMBO, LIBERTY OAK

ATMOSPHERE appears to outclass his opposition in this affair This plater has been showing a world of early speed in route affairs while racing up against it. The abbreviated distance should be right down his alley. DROMBO just missed drubbing Prince Drake last trip He is strictly the one to fear LIBERTY OAK should go well

SECOND—ANNARITA, SALUT D'AMOUR, THE POTTER

ANNARITA needs only an even shake in racing luck in order to grace the winner's circle. SALUT D'AMOUR is a bad legged old fellow but looks all over the one to fear on best races. THE POTTER can better his most recent performance

THIRD—CAPT. JERRY, LITTLE LAD, WORTHINGTON

Throw out CAPT. JERRY'S most recent performance and the Kearns colorbearer looks all over a winner LITTLE LAD has received several tighteners in slightly better company and will be all dangerous especially if the mud comes up. He is a three star mudder in my book WORTHINGTON is dropping down a few pegs and merits serious consideration

FOURTH—OLD REB, CREECH ENTRY, ACCOLADE

OLD REB strikes me as the most improved plater in this sector The Collins colorbearer was a corking second to Hope to Do only a week back. CANT REMEMBER and OUR MAE, which will run coupled in the wagering as the CREECH ENTRY, figure to offer the contention. ACCOLADE did not do badly in the Blackstone Valley Handicap and shapes up best of the others, on the strength of that performance

FIFTH—WHOPPER, PALMA, RED ENSIGN

Just can't pass up WHOPPER in searching for the winner here The Hal Price Headley colorbearer stamped himself one of the season's best three-year-olds when he drubbed a field of older horses that included the great Sation in last Saturday's running of the Blackstone Handicap. Whirled a mile in 1 38 3 under double wraps for a final. Under the favorable impost of 112 pounds, he needs only intelligent handling in order to grace the winner's circle Contention, if any, will likely be furnished by PALMA The latter is tossed in under a feather of 100 pounds and is clearly the next best on previous dope. RED ENSIGN will favor the route and should save the short end.

SIXTH—VICAR, HOWARD, EBONY LADY

VICAR sticks out like the proverbial sore thumb over his opposition here. The Compton colorbearer is a Top Flight handicap star, and needs only to put forth his best effort in order to romp. HOWARD, third in the Narragansett Special, figures next best EBONY LADY is in well under 107 pounds, and should head the others

SEVENTH—LEGENDER, RED ROAMER, FLASHING COLORS

LEGENDER is dropping down from a corking fourth in $3,000 company and appears to have this event at his mercy. RED ROAMER on general form, figures to offer the contention. FLASHING COLORS won his last.

EIGHTH—DARKLING, CARSONO, RACCOON

DARKLING is dropping down where she can hardly miss. CARSONO and RACCOON are the main dangers. They rate as named

Kusiak and Douty Advance in Tilt

Dick Austin, United Shoe, 2 and 1, after a hard-fought round which found them all even at the turn. Martin picked up the 13th, 15th and 17th holes on the trip with pars, while Austin won the 12th Martin's one-putt green on the 17th ended the match

Paul Sullivan defeated James Martin, Jr., Segreganset, 1 up. He came from behind after his opponent had dropped a seven-foot putt for a birdie on the 16th to be one up.

Douty at Peak

It was Waloshyn's bad luck to have his splendid 76 defeated by Douty's great shot-making. The Walpole boy started out with seven successive one-putt greens and got to the turn in 38 strokes, but was one down on Douty's par 36.

On the way home Waloshyn contributed another 38, but this time Douty beat par with a 35.

Douty opened his round with a par five, holding out with one putt He had another one putt green at the second where he got a birdies, and followed it up with a par three at the third. He went over par on the fourth and fifth, getting a five and a four, but got one stroke back at the sixth where he got a birdie 3.

He finished out the round with three regulation fours for his 36.

On the second nine, Douty started out 3—6—4 to be one over par at the 13th He almost holed out his tee shot at the short 13th and sank his five-foot putt for a deuce. Following a regulation four at the 14th, he holed out from six feet for a birdie 3 at the 15th.

He finished out the round 5—5—3, even par. He ended the round by holding his chip shot from 20 feet off the edge of the green. Waloshyn also holed out on a chip shot from well off the green at the 375-yard 14th for a birdie 3.

CARDS MEDICO BEST IN GAME

By Associated Press

New York, Aug. 30—Dr. Harrison Weaver, medicine man of the St. Louis Cardinals, must be the berries. . . . In the 7 years he has been training the Cards they have won four pennants . . . and headed for their fifth.

The Doc says Pepper Martin is his most amazing patient . . . The wild horse can recover overnight from almost any sort of injury . . . And now three guesses as to the best patient . . . You're right the first time - it's none other than the eccentric Mr. Dizzy Dean.

"He does everything I tell him to and no arguments," says Doc Weaver

Weaver's healing powers are famous all over the majors . . . Players of other clubs go to him to be mended . . . Not long ago Ben Cantwell of the Braves paid a midnight visit to have a bad shoulder treated . . . The Doc never played baseball, but he was a football star at Ohio Wesleyan, where his coach was Prof. Branch Rickey, now vice president of the Cardinals

Glenna in Stride

Did that syndicate which controls Jack Derl pitch him to the wolves last night in order to collect its investment? . . .

It's like old times to see Glenna Collett Vare going strong at Interlachen . . . If Pittsburgh puts the Waners on the block Cincinnati will grab them . . . Steve O'Neill's New York admirers will wine and dine him when the Indians come to town September 9

A victory over Donald Budge at Forest Hills will mean a ticket into the first ten for Wilmer Hines South Carolina netter . . . The Yankees eased themselves out gradually, but the Giants are promising a bigger and better collapse than ever . .

Max Baer hasn't had a cigarette in 19 days . . . Nor has his elbow had a workout in that time

Among those who won't manage the Cleveland Indians next year is Donie Bush, former Pirate and Tiger manager . . . President Alva Bradley promptly nailed reports he would bring Donie up from Minneapolis to supplant Steve O'Neil . . . Bill Terry has told the Giants to win or get out . . .

Ambers on Sidelines

That broken jaw will keep Lou Ambers on the sidelines until December . . . congratulations to C. P. (Sally) Miles, former president of the Southern Conference . . He stole a march on his friends the other day and got himself spliced . . .

What hard-hitting outfielder is ticketed for Detroit next year? . . . By special dispensation from Il Duce, Primo Carnera will skip the fun in Ethiopia and keep that date with Walter Neusel November 1 . . .

Detroit banqueted Alex Ross for rounding out 20 years as pro at the Detroit Golf Club . . . One of the longest stretches on record . . . Dazzy Vance, let out by the Dodgers, has caught on with the crack semi-pro bushwicks.

EXTERMINATOR KILMER FAVORITE

EVEN OVER SUN BEAU

By [illegible] Cogswell

Narragansett Park Race Track, R. I., Aug. 30—Willis Sharpe Kilmer. What memories of the turf his name brings forth!

During the present meeting several of Kilmer's horses have been racing here, while tomorrow his Alberta is an entry in the $5000 Providence handicap.

But we'll dig a little deeper into the turf happenings of the medicine man from Binghamton, N. Y

With the accumulation of a vast fortune, Kilmer had the time and means to nourish his particular fad the thoroughbred, both breeding and racing

In a way, his choosing the thoroughbred from the trotter was a feature in itself, for his headquarters, Binghamton, always been famed as a hotbed of the light harness horse

However that may be, Kilmer entered the thoroughbred business with the sole idea of having only the very best stock in the market Money was no object

SMART HORSE

Watch the result. He is the owner of Sun Beau the largest money-winner in the world. Then there was Exterminator first in 50 races and winnings of $252,596. These only to mention two of the Kilmer horses as a sample of his success.

A chat with Kilmer is always most interesting. It is easily learned, though, how his particular equine pet is Exterminator For extended periods he will dilate on the performances of "Old Bones," the nickname commonly called him

During the talk he will tell of the nearly human intelligence of Exterminator, his honesty and the tricks of racing he knew as well as any jockey ever on his back

One will learn, too, that Exterminator was the sort that would race well over all tracks and under any conditions. It made no matter if it was rain, hail or snow track deep in mud or as smooth as velvet, the great horse would always do his very best

Kilmer likes to tell how extremely lazy Exterminator was in his workouts. He fairly detested this training preparation His accustomed rate of speed on these occasions was about a mile an hour

MAKE IT CLOSE

At one point in the racing career of Exterminator it was decided by his trainer that "Old Bones" certainly required a stiff workout before starting in a big stake in which he was entered

To fool the old chap it was mapped out that half-a-dozen horses be lined at the start with him, a bogus starter would wield a flag

Did anybody get away with that? Not so far as "Old Bones" was concerned Looking calmly about he missed the colors on the riders, the crowds in the grandstand and . loped around the track to finish a quarter of a mile back of the leaders.

But when the day of the big race arrived Exterminator was there with bells on. He followed a sizzling pace, just moved up when he was ready, gradually picked up the leaders, and won by a neck

Winning by a neck was another smooth trick of the veteran racer Not for him to come scampering in and smothering his opponents with a lead of several lengths. "Make it close," was his motto. No jockey could do more than that, try as he might Possibly laziness.

In the larger portion of his races Exterminator had the noted jockey Earle Sande, on his back. Sande often has stated that "Old Bones" was a horse nobody could punish either in the stable, in a workout or in a race.

Sande is convinced that were a whipping to have been given to the horse it would have ruined him entirely. In a race, Earle permitted the great horse to find himself about, for he knew how far to drop back of the leaders, and the point to get after them for victory

BRADDOCK

Completes Tour

Dallas, Tex., Aug 30 (AP)—James J. Braddock finished his exhibition tour of the South last night and made plans to leave for New York today with his manager, Joe Gould.

Gould said he and the heavyweight champion likely would depart from New York late in September for a tour of Ireland and England

During his visit in Texas, the champion predicted Max Baer, the man he won the title from would whip Joe Louis, the Detroit negro, in their fight in New York next month.

Peacock

Around In 62; Nine Under Par

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP)—Roger Peacock, young Washington amateur golfer, today was credited with his second round of 62 in a year, nine under par, on the Indian Spring course.

Last summer Peacock's amazing round brought comment from throughout the country. It was one of the lowest scores recorded on a full length course, even though the round was not in tournament competition.

To prove his initial 62 was no fluke, Peacock yesterday duplicated his earlier best. He had a 31 on each nine, was never off the fairway and never in a trap. He had eight birdies and an eagle.

Mary Plans a Change

CHAPTER XXIX

So she went to bed. Lay awake for hours. Finally slept. Woke screaming.

She had dreamed that she was running after an ambulance, running faster and faster, gasping . . . "Wait! Wait for me! It's my Aunt Willie!" But when they stopped and picked her up, Aunt Willie turned out to be Milt Holden, and the steward said, "See, you've killed him, because you wouldn't marry him!"

Of course it was only a dream. But Mary couldn't get it out of her mind. In the morning she telephoned his office, waited until he answered, then hung up.

It was a dirty trick, but she just had to know he was alive!

She looked so happy that Bennet spoke about it, later.

"Tell me the nice thing that's just happened to you!"

She couldn't quite do that. She couldn't say, "Milt Holden was going to commit suicide, but he didn't!"

But she beamed up at him, lips parted, eyes a sparkle, a little dimple trembling in her cheek.

"Did anyone ever tell you that you're most disturbingly pretty?"

"YOU never did!"

"Mm . . . no . . . I try not to mention it. I said 'disturbingly pretty' you know. Young business women should not be so pretty. It's a very good thing you're getting married. I shall send you a case of salt shakers . . . or would you rather have pickle forks? Anyway, I shall send you something very rare and original, like that, all done up in white satin ribbon, and then I shall call up the typewriter company and tell them to send me a good old reliable typist . . . must be over 40 . . . and cross-eyes preferred, and I'll settle down to business in earnest—"

"I'm not reliable?"

"Of course, you are! But you're entirely too pretty. I can say that now, because you're leaving. You have too many disturbing new costumes and your hair curls up too sweetly from the back of your neck—and—what's that perfume you have? Smells like lilacs—"

"It is! It's white lilac! Do you like it, really? That's awfully funny. I thought you never noticed anything. Really I did! I always thought you were one of those men that wouldn't know if a girl wore a gunny sack or a Paris gown!"

"You did!"

"Umhum—and that isn't the funniest part. I'm not engaged any more. I broke it off."

"You—you broke it off!" He put his hand over hers. "Well, Mary Shannon, what will you do next?"

He laughed into her eyes and she laughed back. Her hand, curled under his, began to tremble.

She thought: Oh, isn't this terrible? I am crazy about Bennet! I guess I love him—I wish he'd put his arms around me, and kiss me—right this minute! Oh isn't that a terrible thing to wish . . . suppose he could see it, in my eyes"

The old stiffness crept back into her manner. She said primly, "I found it was a mistake, so I broke it off, of course."

"I suppose I oughtn't to say so, but I'm glad. Milt Holden is a fine person, but there's too great an age difference, it seems to me . . . and—oh, well—I just didn't feel you would have been happy together. I was shocked when I first knew about it. Couldn't get it off my mind. A kid like you . . . why when my sister was your age she was just starting in with her first parties, and college beaux."

"She had a few advantages that I lacked, I imagine," Mary said coldly.

But she still felt weak and sick with the stress of her pent emotion. She still wanted him to put his arms around her, kiss her, crush her.

Her eyes were on the floor. He mustn't guess . . . Ever!

She thought about it, miserably, all through lunch, with Ethelyn.

This was just the crowning humiliation. Color raced in and out of her cheeks. Heat scorched her and then she was cold.

"Do you feel all right, Mary? You look queer."

"Do I? Maybe I have a little cold. When did you say the chief was going to be married?"

Even Ethelyn noticed she looked funny . . . Oh, why did she have to fall all over him, just because he made a few silly remarks about her personal appearance . . . And telling him about breaking off with Holden. He'd think she did it to let him know she was free—open for offers!

Oh, to think she'd been so silly—so CHEAP—

She must try to listen to what Ethelyn was saying . . . Ethelyn had actually stopped talking about Dexter Alexander, was talking about a new job she had been offered.

"Did you say you were considering a new JOB?"

"Oh, not seriously. It would be interesting though. I've always thought I'd like being secretary to a famous woman. The opportunities are almost irresistible . . . opera and symphonies and all the plays, and meeting so many interesting people. I've always wanted to live in New York."

"Who hasn't?"

Offer Refused

"I realize, of course, that being companion to a woman, has its drawbacks. As my cousin says, Emilie Crawford is the kind who wouldn't hesitate to ask you to do up a blouse for her, or go shopping or anything else, but I think I could put up with that for a hundred a month and all expenses. Of course, the travel opportunities would appeal most—"

"Are you telling me you have a chance to be secretary for some woman for a hundred a month and all expenses, and travel besides?"

"Yes, I really have. It happened in the oddest way. This Emilie Crawford used to know my cousin years ago. They both were graduated from Vassar. It's my cousin Georgia, you know. Mrs. Herbert de Souza. You've heard me speak of her, she has the lovely home in St. Francis Wood. And Emilie Crawford is Dr. Emilie Parkman Crawford, the psychologist—you've heard of her."

"Oh, yes," said Mary, though she had not.

"She happened to mention to Georgia that she was tired of just getting a secretary for a short time everywhere she went and she thought she'd try to find a girl—quite an exceptional person it would have to be, of course—and Georgia thought of me."

Delight for her friend's good fortune, and honest envy too, shone on Mary's face.

"Ethelyn: I positively hate you for your luck! If you aren't the luckiest! Oh, but I'm glad. It's just the best thing that could happen to you, getting out of—"

A warning look fom Ethelyn silenced her . . . Ethelyn looking hurt behind the shiny eyeglasses.

CHAPTER NINE

Andrews, grinding his cigar to powder in his twitching fingers, sat as if hypnotized as the chief of police resumed:

"Friend—that's what the reporters will call you—the people in the street will talk about ways they'd like to torture you—the mob outside the jail will get bigger and bigger and they'll start yelling and then somebody'll throw a rock—"

Andrews leaped from his chair.

"Stop!" he screamed. "They'll never get me. I'll kill myself!"

The Chief and the D. A. leaned back in their chairs, gazing smilingly at the unnerved racketeer. Finally Andrews slumped back into his seat and wiped the beads of perspiration from his brow. Almost paternally, the District Attorney leaned toward him.

"Suppose you didn't have to take that rap, Andrews?"

A look of hope brightened the mobster's face, and the chief of police added:

"Suppose we said you could talk your way out of the chair—sing your way out of the hands of the mob—just let the case of your kid-wife and your wife's kid go up in smoke?"

"Sure. Sure. What's the price?" Andrews responded hastily.

"We want Carston," explained the D. A., "and to get him we might compromise with you."

"I don't know nuthin' about him."

"What about last night?" asked the chief of police.

Andrews started to say something, but checked himself.

"I'd rather go to the chair—take it from a lynch mob—than sing a song to you guys on Carston. They'd take me up to the Castle and go over me like they did Farelle"—he shuddered with revulsion—"it was weeks before they put him out."

"Listen, Andrews," interposed the District Attorney. "You can protect yourself. Tell us the inside and then you go on as though nothing had happened, mingle with the mob. Then we'll spring you as a surprise witness at the trial. It'll send Carston to the chair so fast that he won't have a chance to put the finger on you."

"Yeah. I maybe could do that," Andrews whimpered.

"You will or go to the chair yourself," the chief answered. "Take it or leave it. Take it or you don't leave here."

"Okay, fellas. I'll chirp."

"I thought so," commented the District Attorney, rubbing his hands. "Secretary, take down what Andrews has to say."

Andrews Signs

For three-quarters of an hour, under the deft and piercing questioning of the veteran law officials, Andrews "sang," and as he talked the skilled fingers of the secretary took down the damaging evidence against "King" Carston in a neat, cryptic shorthand account of murder, extortion, torture, corruption and blood.

When Andrews was finished there was a delay of some minutes while the secretary transcribed his notes into a formal, typewritten confession. During that interim Andrews, the chief and the District Attorney sat facing one another in dramatic, ponderous silence.

The secretary at last returned with the document and handed it to the District Attorney, who scanned it briefly and then handed it to the now cringing gangster.

"Put your John Hancock on this, Andrews. It's a death warrant for Carston, all right, and a pardon for you."

Andrews hesitated for a moment and then, nervously grasping the pen held out toward him, scribbled his signature.

The Chief took the signed statement from the gangster's hands, and, blotting the signature carefully, ordered.

"Now get out of here. Tell the mob we worked over you but it didn't take, see? Keep on exactly as you have been and when we need you we'll come and get you. It's a cinch you won't talk and this office won't leak, because you're our ace in the hole—and we don't want that hole to be a grave."

With a nervously effusive goodbye, the perspiring mobster left, and the District Attorney handed the confession to his secretary.

"Put this in the file," and then to the Chief—"We've got Carston this time. Give the papers enough time to stir up the proper indignation over this last batch of blood spilling, and then we'll put him on ice."

As this conversation went on, the secretary was humbly busying himself placing the confession in a drawer of the steel filing cabinet. It was a small, heavy cabinet, and as the secretary closed the drawer, he stealthily inserted the cover of a paper match-book into the automatic snap-lock. Then he closed the drawer.

The Chief and the District Attorney were beaming and shaking hands. They had Alex Carston in the box—that steel box!

Far removed from the business section of the Big Burg, in a seemingly respectable middle-class residential hotel, Alex Carston, king of racketeers, who owned it, maintained the personal headquarters from which he controlled the vice destinies of his vast underworld empire.

The unimposing lobby contained only the most meager of furnishings—a large center table covered with files of newspapers and old magazines, a few ancient upholstered chairs and a scarred imitation-mahogany desk.

CHAPTER 435

EDWIN BRAITHWAITE'S tired and troubled eyes were suddenly bright and hopeful as I told him that later he would find me ready to talk to him about the reason for Harriet's secret distress.

"You really believe that you can clear it up?" he asked me.

"I believe that you can," I told him, and left him to cull over the cryptic suggestion. I shot a glance over my shoulder as I started to mount the stairs, and saw that he was standing motionless where I had left him, his eyes looking off into space.

But away from the compelling influence of his anxiety, my conscience and my inhibitions, the result of the rigid Puritan training given me by my mother, began riding me.

What right had I, they asked me, to breathe to Harriet's husband a fear which she herself would die rather than voice to him?

I was glad, indeed, to see Dicky come striding down the upper hall from his room, as I reached the top of the stairs. My husband is so compelling a person, one so full of the joy of life, that when one is with him there is no time to consider perplexing problems, except those which he, himself, may present. And, after all, I told myself, I need not decide now how much or how little of Harriet's trouble I should confide to Edwin. The whole problem could wait—must wait—until the evening or the morrow.

"Well! What's the good word?" Dicky queried with a grin, as we came face to face in the upper hall. "Affairs of the nation all settled satisfactorily, so they will function smoothly until you return from the trip to Patchogue with the kids?"

I flushed at his raillery, which struck a familiar and an annoying note. I know that Dicky does not mean to imply that I am officious or meddling, but my imagination often reads that implication in his gibing, and my conscience especially prodded my imagination as he spoke.

"I'm ready to go if you are," I told him a bit shortly.

With a sudden, swooping movement he pinioned my chin in his uninjured hand, and turned my face up to his.

"Was her little feelings hurt?" he asked with a grin. "Or I suppose I should say were her little feelings hurt? Honestly, I didn't mean a thing."

"I know you didn't," I said laughing, restored to sanity and good humor by his foolery. "And the feelings are in fine condition. Shall we go down to the boys?"

"I think it would be advisable," he said, gravely. "Poor kids! I fancy they'll be glad to get back, even to school. They were sort of white around the gills when they were gathering up their things just now. And their comments upon the gagged—or rather, now ungagged—Chinese, were highly illuminative of the reasons for their color. Why did they have to go down there, anyway?"

"I'll tell you that on the way back from Patchogue," I promised him. "Just now I'm anxious to get that train, you know, and I want to make sure that we give ourselves ample time for changing a tire."

"Yes, little love," he chanted, "we will do all that—holy mackerel!"

The last exclamation was below his breath, but looking past him, I saw what had caused it. His mother stood in the doorway of the nursery, glaring at us.

MOTHER ON RAMPAGE

"Have you no consideration for your child?" she demanded. "I have spent hours in getting her to sleep, and then you chatter and giggle right outside the doorway. I thought it was the children until I looked out. I could not believe that a grown man and woman could be so childish and thoughtless."

As my mother-in-law had been in the nursery less than half an hour, I did not take seriously her plaint of having spent hours in getting our baby daughter to sleep. But I knew what was demanded of the occasion, and I made my voice contrite.

"Oh! I am so sorry," I said. "We didn't think. Did we waken her?"

"It isn't your fault that you didn't," she retorted, and I knew that Dicky was controlling his risibles with difficulty. "But where is Harriet? I thought she understood my directions to have Mrs. Bickett take her place in nursing Major Grantland. Yet she hasn't come back here."

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Has Love Right of Way Over Convention?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HOW MUCH does love owe to convention?

If two young people are intensely in love, need the fact that the girl is recently a widow delay their marriage?

Is this a question which a woman's own heart, and nothing else, should decide for her?

Or have we still a trace of the feeling that forced Indian widows to fling themselves on flaming pyres, by way of human sacrifice to their dead husbands?

"Enamored," a girl of 20 and three months a widow, puts before me this very problem.

"I am wildly in love," she writes, "and for the first time. My husband was a high school friend. He was a dear boy and I was very fond of him. But I never dreamed what love could be until my new lover kissed me.

"He is a marvelous man, in every way. He adores me, could support me handsomely, and would like to marry me without a day's delay. In fact, he seems to have a sort of now-or-never attitude which I really love in him. I hate men who are weak and indifferent.

THEY SUSPECT HER

"But when I was left penniless I had to come back home to live, and my parents think they own me. Besides, we live among a group of relatives who think I should not even let a man come to see me. They already have started a scandal because they suspect I want to marry. And even my mother says my clothes aren't black enough.

"Suppose I say we must wait a year. Dizzy with love as I am, have I the strength to stick to it? Or suppose we run away tomorrow and seize the happiness we long for? My family would feel disgraced and would never speak to me again. Can you help me?"

A COMPROMISE

As for the demands of conventions I must confess that hree months is rather a startlingly short interval between he old love and the new and I hope it can be stretched to six.

Eanamored" might make one last effort to retain some personal independence by proposing this compromise to her fiance and to her family. Three months, after all, is no more than a girl really needs to make her personal preparations, buy her clothes and decide upon her new home.

But if the love is too impatient and the family too straight-laced to make any compromise possible, an immediate marriage is I suppose, inevitable

But after all, why not? There has been no disloyalty, no unkindness. And the claim of a genuine romantic love does deserve to be considered

Who Is Sylvia?

By Nell Brinkley

ACCORDING to the song, Sylvia is the girl whom "all the swains come 'round." . . . In this pretty picture, Nell Brinkley has given us her impression of the sort of girl favored by swains of 1591 and 1935.

In each case she is a delicate, feminine creature with wide, helpless eyes, which carry an appeal to the masculine heart. Her lips are soft and her hair falls in ringlets.

Strength and severity in a woman have never yet attracted men. They love the flattery of a "clinging vine," who leans upon their superior strength . . . That is why the Sylvias through the ages have wisely remained sweet and feminine.

Blood-Color Makeup

For Natural, Glowing Effect

By JULIET SHELBY

THERE are some of us who do not care to get a summer tan, preferring for one reason or another to keep our natural skin tone.

Sometimes a very delicate blush rouge and lipstick [illegible] highly effective, especially in the evening when we go in for gossamer gowns in the most delicate of colors. Vivid lipsticks and cheek rouge then are out of place

But during the day hours, for those of us who do not go in for changing our skins, the more natural cheek color and lip color blend perfectly. And, as you know, that particular shade is difficult to find There are orange, purple, blue and vivid crimson shades, but that special blood color is rare.

* * *

But you can get it. Just about now it is reaching your cosmetic counter in lipstick and compact cake rouge. I call it cherry red, but that is not quite accurate. It's so absolutely natural looking on your skin that many will believe that you have benefited by your recent holiday and are now going through the summer without artificial color.

And how nice to look natural! Whenever I see exquisite Tala Birell, with her quiet poise and beautiful face, I wish I could tote her around to show women what I mean when I say "beauty."

Carefully Tala has chosen artificial color to flatter the genuine, and I am sure this lipstick and cake rouge of which I speak will find their way to her dressing table

To learn the name of this rouge and lipstick, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Weekend Problem

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—If my husband, my child and I visit my sister-in-law, who lives in the country, for a week-end, is it good form or a breach of etiquette to give a little money to the cook, the maid and the chauffeur?

2—Whatever your answer is, does it also hold true when visiting a friend and not a member of the family?

3—Is it proper to take a small gift or a box of candy to the hostess?

G.

1—When you, your husband and child spend a week-end as guests of your sister-in-law it is definitely the proper thing for you to fee the servants in her home.

It is especially important to do this when you are accompanied by your child, since this usually means special service.

The largest fee would probably be to the maid, for her service will probably be more personal. And it is best form for you to give these fees not in the presence of your hostess or host.

2—Yes. We give these fees whether we are visiting members of our family or friends. They show a gracious and generous thought.

3—Yes. This also is a gracious and generous thing to do. And, if we wish, when we write our bread-and-butter letter after a visit we send a more consequential gift to our hostess.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
3 ♡ (1)	Pass	5 ♡ (2)	Pass
6 ♡ (3)	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) Having passed originally, North had a very fine double raise. Because of the original pass, the double raise is not forcing to game and South, with a shaded bid, could have passed

(2) South's hand is so strong that he has strong hopes for a slam, but cannot bid it because of his shortage of Aces

(3) North knows South is principally interested in Aces; South's own strength can hardly be in Aces or he could have bid four notrump. Being able to supply two Aces, North goes to six.

West opened the Queen of diamonds and East won the Ace and returned a small diamond. South jumped up with the King and took stock

He was left with a losing diamond and a possible losing club One of them could be discarded on the third spade in dummy.

The other might be eliminated by means of a club finesse. Also, if the hand could be retduced to two cards and West, who was marked by his lead with the Jack of diamonds, held the King of clubs as well, he would be unable to guard it and it would fall on the Ace, establishing the Queen.

This is the squeeze play and since trying the squeeze would not interfere with the right to take a finesse later, South went after the hand on that basis.

He cashed his six hearts, discarding a club and a diamond from dummy on the last two.

On these hearts West threw all his spades, one club and his two hearts. Now South laid down the king of spades and West threw another club. He led another spade and West threw a diamond.

Finally, dummy's Ace of spades was cashed, and on this West cleverly false-carded by throwing the ten of clubs and holding on to the eight. East had thrown away everything but the King and nine of clubs.

At this point South knew West held the Jack of diamonds and one club.

If that club was the King South should cash the Ace.

If it was a low club, South should finesse through East. Being blinded by the beauty of the squeeze play—if there had been a squeeze play—and being fooled by West's discard of the ten of clubs, which would indicate he held the King of clubs above it, South led a club from dummy and, instead of finessing, played the Ace

West triumphantly dropped the eight and East exhibited the King which won the last trick and defeated the contract.

Decrease of T. B. Mortality

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

Tuberculosis, once Captain of the Men of Death, is losing its grip on the world.

It is no longer the grimmest of conquerors.

That it is so grim is because it chooses the young. We can regard with more equanimity the ravages of heart disease and even cancer. I bow apologetically to the societies devoted to the prevention of those two old menaces, in saying this, but it is none the less true, because the age period of death for heart disease and cancer is closer to the seventies than to the twenties.

* * *

It is from the roster of the young, with all their work before them, that tuberculosis reads its death roll. Or if not all their work before them their accomplishments have given promise of something greater and finer. Keats, Chopin, Stevenson, Aubrey Beardsley, Ernest Dowson—the list is a long one.

"Although the outlook is optimistic regarding the present-day treatment for tuberculosis, and the ever-decreasing mortality rate is very gratifying, there is no place for foolish complacency! Tuberculosis is still a worthy foe. The deaths have decreased, but the number of people sick with tuberculosis in the United States has decreased very little, if any. Every sanatorium has a long waiting list; every free dispensary is crowded. Statistics of former years are inadequate, and consequently unreliable, for comparison with present-day figures. More accurate methods of diagnosis now reveal cases which could formerly have escaped the tuberculosis classification."

One of the chief reasons why tuberculosis accomplishes its destruction lies in the insidiousness of the onset.

* * *

The four symptom groups that should warn a young person enough to make him go to a doctor and have a careful physical examination are:

(1) Fatigue, beyond any reasonable explanation. Combined with afternoon fever, and gradual weight loss, even more suggestive.

(2) Cough—continuous, unexplained.

(3) Steady loss of weight, especially if accompanied by afternoon fever.

(4) Blood coming up into the mouth from the lungs—hemorrhage. Those who have this as an early sign are lucky, because they are frightened enough to go to a doctor.

NOW HEINZ MAKES THE KIND OF PICKLE JEFFERSON LIKED

"On a hot day in Virginia I know of nothing more comforting than a fine spiced pickle, brought up trout-like from the sparkling depths of that aromatic jar below stairs in Aunt Sally's Cellar" ThJefferson.

Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, and third President of the United States, was a famous gourmet of his time.

YOU will agree with Thomas Jefferson when you taste Heinz Fresh Cucumber Pickle. For Heinz now makes it precisely as his Aunt Sally doubtless did—from a treasured recipe handed down for generations.

Such mild and mellow spiced pickle you have never tasted, except perhaps from the pickle jar in homes where good old home-made pickle is served. Heinz Fresh Cucumber Pickle retains the delicate flavor and crisp tenderness of choice cucumbers picked fresh from the vines.

Heinz Fresh Cucumber Pickle arouses one's appetite. Use it as a sandwich filler. To midnight snacks, afternoon teas, and luncheons it adds just the right racy-flavor note. Because it is made the old-fashioned way, it is easily digestible—the ideal relish for children. Served generously, these tender, spicy slices make a quickly prepared salad.

Once you try this grand pickle confection you will probably always keep a jar or two at hand. Delightfully they satisfy that mid-afternoon or bed-time craving for sweets and other things that tend to add weight.

Try Heinz Cucumber Pickle and surprise your family with a new relish-thrill. Available in liberal size jars, it is the new low-cost salad. In the refrigerator it keeps perfectly after the jar is opened. Ask your grocer about this very popular Heinz Variety.

Terror in the North

Bridge of Ice Crumbies Beneath Feet of Bill Daly and Queer Partner, the Professor

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

FLOYD GIBBONS

"I'm just an old-timer," says William T. Daly of 3383 East Tremont avenue, Bronx, N. Y., "mushing on toward the end of the trail. And I haven't much else to do except sit and spin yarns for anyone who will listen to an old man who lives mostly in the past."

Well, sir, I'm here to tell the world that if Bill Daly does nothing but spin yarns for the rest of his life—that's plenty. And if he's living in the past he's living a darned sight better than most people do in the present, because Bill's past is full of adventures and experiences in places that you and I have to look up on the map just to be sure that such a place exists at all.

Ellsmere Land, for instance. Now who in the heck ever heard of Ellsmere Land. I found it on the map—after a half hour's search—way up in the Arctic Circle, off the north end of Greenland. That was the place where Bill, nearly half a century ago, had the adventure he is going to tell about now.

What was Bill looking for way up there in Ellsmere Land? Furs—gold—adventure—oh, anything that came to hand. Bill wasn't particular. Bill's partner, though, had definite ideas of what he wanted. He was a college professor who went grubbing around under the Arctic snows for bits of grass and moss, and little hunks of worthless stone, and people eyed him with suspicion up there on the fringes of the Circle.

They said Bill was crazy to take an unknown outsider for a partner—a man who had little experience with the North and its ways. But there came a time when Bill was doggone glad he had that bookish little fellow with him.

It was coming spring up in Ellsmere Land. Soon the ice field on which Bill and the Professor had crossed from Greenland would begin to break up. If they didn't want to be marooned on Ellsmere Land with supplies running low, they'd have to hike themselves to get back to Greenland. They loaded their belongings on their dog sleds and headed west.

"We had barely started," says Bill, "when the ice began to shudder and groan all along the edge of the water. We were too late. The ice was breaking weeks before we had expected it to. We turned our sleds about and in a driving snow, to the yelping cries of our frightened dogs and the roar of the rending floes, began to fight our way back to shore again.

"We hadn't gone more than half a dozen steps before a yawning black hole opened at our very feet. In a shower of blinding spray we flung ourselves violently backward, but the sleds went under, and the dogs, tangled in their traces, went down with them. In one moment we were stripped to the furs we stood in. At one leap we were back in the Stone Age, facing the relentless forces of the North, armed only with our bare hands, our brains and the will of man."

The first problem facing Bill and the Professor was to get back to the land. They did that, hopping precariously from one ice floe to another. The next was to get shelter, and they found that in a snug cave in the lee of a great headlock. Next they had to have fire. That one stumped Bill, but it was then that the Professor stepped in and showed that, after all, Bill hadn't been so crazy in taking him for a partner. The Professor knew a million and one things that Bill, with all his experience in the North had never heard of.

He went out and came back with some fragments of flint and a bundle of Arctic moss, and in a few minutes there was a roaring fire going in the cave. Whatever they needed the Professor knew where to find it—knew where the mosses grew beneath the hillside drifts—knew from the formation of the land where to dig in the snow if you expected to find flint underneath.

Food was their next worry, and they set out to find it. "Musk ox were scarce," says Bill, "and difficult to trace, but inside of an hour we found one, a leg broken, marooned on the edge of a great cliff. With broken pieces of flint—with our bare hands—avid in our need, and ravenous with the terrible hunger of the North, we fell upon it. We'll skip the next part. Man is not nice or dainty in his eating when he's forced back a few thousand years."

The musk ox provided food, and also bedding of a sort, for they took off the hide and used it as a blanket. For two weeks they lived on the carcass of the dead ox and such mosses as the Professor brought in, and then they were discovered by some native Innuits, who had paddled over from Greenland in their open kayaks to hunt the herds of ovibo, which then roamed the icy shores of Ellsmere Land. The Innuits offered to take them over to the mainland, and Bill and the Professor didn't need any second invitation. A couple of weeks later they were safe in Greenland again.

There's a yarn that has come all the way from the Arctic. But you don't have to go that far—or anywhere near that far to find adventure. Plenty of them are happening right here at home every day in the week. You boys and girls know that. You've all had an adventure or two right around the corner from where you're standing now. Send me that story. Tomorrow: "That Crawling Thing."

RETAIL TRADE

Supplies CHEERING Reports

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Gains in activity are reported along the entire New England business front in the current Dun & Bradstreet trade report.

Retail sales supply particularly bright news under the leadership of the apparel, the lumber and the hardware divisions. Total dollar sales in each of these having increased for the month upwards of 10 per cent. Small stores which have been experiencing poor business during the earlier months of the year are now said to note improvement in volume. Wholesalers provide the poor news, with many reported to feel there is little chance of an improvement.

* * *

While lumber sales stage good percentage gains, the fact remains volume of building in this section is failing to make as favorable showing as in other parts. Contracts are up again and materials moving a little better. Prices range from steady to slightly higher. Chief consolation of those who insist on good building reports before embracing prosperity-is-here ideas is that once the trend is up, no matter how much or how little, it usually stays up. In fact there is some evidence to support the theory a soundly founded building revival does not slacken until boom proportions are attained. Particularly in the residential field.

Shorts: July report of Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway reveals a net loss of $42,122 . . . Just $10,053 under July, 1934 . . . Revenues gained slightly and operating expenses were cut rather sharply. . . . A cut in funded debt interest was offset by a tax increase . . . Depreciation and equalization account required more money this year . . . All in all, the trend of Eastern affairs is satisfactory . . . We see no reason to change advice of a year ago that its bonds offered a good speculative opportunity . . . And for the long winded the preferred is still viewed as having reasonable attractions.

Sears Roebuck by itself, or with help of sponsors, if such exist in these days of legislated markets, is trying a risky trick. After a rise from 38 to 59, with one 3-point or more reaction, and that from 59 to 53, the promise of a new upturn is held out by current market action. More rest seems absolutely necessary. Perhaps an immediate reversal is possible, but the skeptic who holds aloof would seem the wise operator. A full correction to 48-50 is our hope. All figures used are flat without allowance for fractions.

Market Comment: An inquiry regarding personal composite average of this writer seeks information on its recent action . . . It has been in a minor downtrend since August 13 and has broken through the comparative low points other averages have failed to violate . . . Air Reduction has slipped into a minor downtrend . . . These two bits of market action are a matter for some concern . . . Accounts that can not afford to carry stocks down and average at lower levels should place stop loss orders under the lows made earlier this week . . . The advice is not as bearish as it is cautious.

Cotton Carryover Is Reduced

By International News Service

Washington, Aug. 30—Reduction in the world's carryover of cotton today left the available supply of this commodity virtually the same as last year's, the Department of Agriculture estimated.

The survey disclosed significant developments in the situation as a result of the American program, the principal ones being:

1. An increase in foreign production in spite of unfavorable weather conditions.

2—A drop of 2,3504,000 bales in consumption of American cotton under last year's and a reduction of 2,275,000 bales less than the average consumption level.

3—Exports of American cotton were 2,700,000 bales less than the preceding year, and 3,100,000 bales under the 10-year export average.

Offsetting this trend, the department noted that foreign consumption of American cotton totaled about 6,100,000 bales, reflecting a reduction by use of more than 1,200,000 bales in the foreign-held stocks of American cotton.

OIL GROUP IS BACKWARD

New York, Aug. 30—Curb market stocks settled down in a narrow trading range today with improvement among utilities and mining shares the principal feature.

Oils were a trifle backward and there was little activity among industrials.

Fractional improvement was shown by American Gas, Niagara Hudson and Electric Bond & Share. Holly Sugar advanced 1½ points and Murphy Company gained 1 on small scales.

Fractional losses were shown by International Petroleum and Gulf Oil, while Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Parker Rust Proof and Sherwin-Williams held unchanged. Lake Shore Mines and Newmont Mining each gained nearly a point.

STOCKS Steady at CLOSE

PRE-HOLIDAY DULLNESS

New York, Aug. 30—Scattered specialties pushed forward in today's stock market, but the majority of the leaders held to a small fractional range.

Dullness marked the proceedings throughout the greater part of the session and the ticker tape halted frequently. A pre-holiday atmosphere was present in the board rooms.

The new shares of Paramount common and second preferred were quite active with gains of about a point each. Other advances of fractions to around a point were shown by U S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, United Fruit, Evans Products, McIntrye Porcupine, Consolidated Gas, Columbia Gas, American Power & Light commond and preferred, Santa Fe and N. Y. Central. The oils were easier.

The Tate tone was steady.

Although there were doubters in the commission houses, the majority of analysts were still friendly to stocks, as a whole, especially for the long pull.

In view of the contrary action of the list following the adjournment of Congress, however, the talk of an upward spurt after Labor Day was not so loud.

Some buying in the utilities was said to have been based on the belief that many of these stocks have seen their worst and have discounted results of the holding company law.

The shaky gasoline and crude structures again handicapped the oil shares. The firmer specialties responded to forecasts of growing profits for the companies concerned.

Current Items

At the start of trading most of the brokerage offices reflected a cheerful attitude toward trends.

An upturn in retail activities during the week, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, encouraged recovery proponents. At the same time it was found that the recent fast pace of wholesale operations had slackened somewhat.

"The summer season," the review stated, "is closing with some of the most spectacular increases in many years recorded for both the production and distribution of merchandise, and with preparations under way for a wider advance during the fall."

It was also noted that the average of industrial operations continued to hold between 20 and 30 per cent above the comparative 1934 level.

Wall Street expressed no surprise at the weekly statement of the Federal Reserve System which revealed a jump in excess reserves of member banks to another new high record.

The increase was attributed largely to treasury disbursements secured by the deposit of gold certificates with regional banks and from the lowering of member bank reserve requirements under the new banking act.

A drop of $64,000,000 in brokers' loans during the week ended Aug. 28 was readily explained in the decline in security prices.

The total of these loans—now only about $807,000,000—was seen as a reassuring long-term technical factor.

Sterling opened at $4.97⅛, off ¼ of a cent, and the French franc was .00¼ of a cent easier at 6.61½ cents.

GOVERNMENT Bonds in New Dip

New York, Aug. 30 (AP)—U. S. government obligations turned downward in the bond market today, following a sharp rally late yesterday which carried over into the early morning session.

Lossesc in active issues ranged from 4-32 to 14-32 of a point as bond dealers reflected further on the failure yesterday of the $100,000,000 of treasury-guaranteed federal farm loan bonds, on which subscriptions for only about $85,50,000 were received.

With net income of Norfolk & Western for July showing an increase of $500,282 over like month year ago, the total for the seven months' cumulative period was only $184,245 less than for same period of 1934, notwithstanding certain increases in operating expenses.

LEADERS TELL

How to BRING REAL Recovery

By B. C. Forbes

Many times the writer has been charged with indulging more in criticisms of the New Deal than in offering constructive suggestions.

For months this writer's contention has been that America is ripe and ready for going ahead economically if politicians would only give industry a respite from harassment.

Instead of attempting to tell how business leaders feel recovery could and should be expedited. In response to inquiries, the following messages from heads of corporations employing large working forces have been received:

President George P. Torrence, Link-Belt Company:

Hope is gone that it is possible to convince the present administration that "economic voluntarism," under our Constitution, is better for the people of the United States than a system of coercion by the federal government, even when the executives and administrators of the government are benevolent and wise.

No change is to be expected in Washington policies, and no cessation in the attacks on private business and industry.

The present administration does not recognize these as creators of wealth and wellbeing, and mechanisms for social betterment.

Change will come through the ballot box.

In the meantime business and industry, employer and employe, should do the best they can to carry on, and to continue creating wealth in spite of the unnecessary handicaps that beset them. Business and industry must show all voters that they can operate successfully independent of the government.

* * *

President Cornelius F. Kelley, Anaconda Copper Mining Company:

America stands at the crossroads.

The road to the left is marked by enormous deficits in the national budget, assaults upon constitutional government and the guarantees that the fundamental law gave to personal liberty and property rights.

Attacks upon industry [illegible] ness have shaken the [illegible] of our people in our [illegible] and have checked the [illegible] toward recovery by [illegible] thrift by actulel and [illegible] discriminatory taxation [illegible] fiscatory measures.

This road, if long enough pursued, can lead to no other termini than inflation, repudiation and confiscation.

The road to the right leads to a return to those principles of governmental administration that characterized and made possible the growth, progress and prosperity of the American commonwealth and which meant an equality of opportunity, balanced budgets and economical administration of government.

Governmental expenditures must be made with the realization that the funds so expended are not public money but the public's money, i.e., the money of the taxpayers which represents their thriftful accumulations of the past, and the continuance of the supply of which depends upon an opportunity to accumulate in the future.

Cannot someone impress upon legislators the simple, homely truth of the goose and the golden egg?

Which of the alternative roads will the people of America choose to follow?

Commodity Prices Highest in Years

By International News Service

Washington, Aug. 30—The present level of wholesale commodity prices is the highest that has been reached during the past [illegible] and shows a net gain of nearly [illegible] per cent since January 1, the Bureau of Statistics of the [illegible] partment announced today.

Compared with the corresponding week of last year, foods advanced 14 per cent, and farm products rose 12.4 per cent to register the largest increases. Hides and leather products were up 6.6 per cent and chemicals and drugs rose 4.3 per cent during the year.

Building materials, however, declined 1.5 per cent during the year, and the level of miscellaneous commodities dropped 4.1 per cent.

The rise in wholesale food prices last week exceeded that of the commodity average, the bureau said. An advance of 0.8 percent brought the food price level to the highest point reached thus far in 1935. Meat prices, which recently had led the upward swing of foods, increased only 9.7 per cent during the week. An increase of 1.8 per cent was made by a sub-group, including butter, cheese and milk. The current index for the foods group was 86.1 per cent of the 1926 level.

"THE American Constitution is, so far as I can see, THE MOST WONDERFUL WORK ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man."—WILLIAM E. GLADSTONE, England's illustrious statesman, in an article, "Kin Beyond Sea," published in September, 1878.

The League of Nations a Failure Indeed!

THE League of Nations has long been regarded as dead—"excessively dead," one might say.

It is hard therefore to understand the vehemence of Mussolini's warning that the League must not interfere with Italy's projected war against Ethiopia.

The League is told by him, with defiant flourish, that if it resorts to "economic sanctions"—in other words, tries pressure or coercion—Italy will withdraw from membership in the League.

There is nothing new or singular in this.

Every member of the League when confronted by its own agreement to abstain from war or any form of aggression withdraws from the League.

The recent course of Germany and Japan has shown this to be virtually one of the League's implied covenants—that when any member finds its signature taken seriously by other members of the league, it shall withdraw.

POOR OLD LEAGUE! ILL-STARRED AND MISADVENTURED FLOP!

It wasn't born to live.

As Lord Riddell brings out, in his intimate diary of the Versailles conference, the League's failure was seen to be inevitable by Lloyd George in 1919 when the signatures to the covenant were hardly dry.

Now we behold one member of the League determined to wage war against a fellow member of the League, both bound by its terms, for aggrandizement in wealth and territory of one member nation at the expense of another.

A FAILURE INDEED—the League of Nations!

More Safety Razors AND Barbers

The modern Jeremiahs tell you that science and invention are steadily increasing unemployment, and that unless there's a halt to "progress" everybody will some day be out of jobs.

Mr. Howard Jeremiah Scott, the technocrat, had everybody more or less worried with his dismal predictions along that line a year ago.

Authorities of greater standing than Mr. Scott have predicted the same thing.

But a homely instance of invention which has had the opposite effect makes you wonder if these powerful thinkers think as powerfully as they are presumed to.

About twenty-five years ago the safety razor came into popularity in America.

By all the rules, it ought to have closed hundreds of barbershops and eliminated thousands of barbers.

But let's take a look at the record.

In 1910 there were 195,000 barbers, hairdressers and manicurists in the country.

In 1930, according to the last Federal census, there were 374,000.

And the safety razor business was also booming.

The moral seems to be that just when the Jeremiahs have an economic Judgment Day marked on the calendar, the human race upsets their calculations.

It must be a hard life—a prophet's.

Waste $753,502?

It's a Lot of YOUR Money

In direct or indirect taxation, nearly everyone reading this editorial has contributed his or her bit toward the $753,502 State Commissioner William F. Callahan would spend.

Commissioner Callahan would have the money spent in hiring hundreds of men and women to count the automobiles traveling over State highways.

The idea is that the State would be able with these figures to calculate the life of the roads.

It seems as if the State authorities SHOULD know this pretty well right now.

It is also suggested the survey would enable the police authorities to know where traffic lights and officers should be put.

But IF they don't know this already, they might as well give it up.

We cannot approve of impractical PWA or other projects designed ONLY to furnish employment to a favored few.

Today's Actors

Are They As Good As Yesterday's?

Mr. Daniel Frohman, dean of the American stage, observes his 85th birthday by taking a hand in that everlasting argument on whether the actors of today are as good as those of yesterday.

Mr. Frohman says they are not—that today we are content with personality in an actor, while yesterday they looked for, and sometimes found, the divine spark of genius.

He, undoubtedly, is in the best position to judge, being able, with his own eyes, to hold the present against the past.

But it won't settle the argument, for 85 years from now it will still be going on with some other dean fondly remembering tomorrow's yesterday.

Now, at last, the guns are silent,

Ends at last its sound and fury,

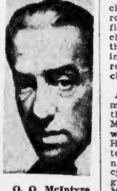
Comes a truce, a temporary
Freedom from vindictive sniping
And the weary, worn defenders
Raise their heads above the trenches.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Aug. 30—Thoughts while strolling: The first time you turned the light of an electric torch in your mouth. What red cheeks! Lily Pons sounds like a peg-legged man coming up wooden steps. Top in marital off-the-track flying—the Tommy Manvilles. Top in recent books: "Everything Is Thunder."



O. O. McIntyre

Look alikes: Fred Knowles and Jesse Livermore. Most original slang: "I should worry!" and "Ain't we got fun!"—because they invented a new syntax. No sight of Fanny Ward lately. So they are pulling down the Trocadero in Paris. Simile: "As irregular as French verbs."

Ask your right hand dinner partner what Logistics means. But take care he isn't a West Pointer. Electric razors somehow sound cruel. Best of all names for a clipper ship—The Flying Cloud. Who remembers when they used to name locomotives? The way crowds turn to gaze at a pug dog!

Only way to have a thin umbrella: Buy a cane-umbrella and throw the sheath away. Ogden Nash is a brief case addict, too. For a revised Dante's Inferno: A man packing two trunks with enough for another left over. And the baggage man calling to hurry! No more great stars such as Bernhardt, Duse.

Autobiographer's dilemma: What'll I do about the gals? No one can touch of "strictly Broadway" applause like Belle Baker. J. Ham Lewis and Wendell Dodge could swap whiskers without changing their looks. Memory feat: Recalling instantly the book one wants most to read in a big book store.

I have a bookish friend who likes to snoop around the big toy stores for the latest inventions. His most recent report concerns an automobile speed boat four inches long. To make it go, you only squirt in a couple of drops of water and it goes like fun. Probably sodium, metallic. Heats the water in a little steam turbine.

Height of indifference: Basil Woon once saw an American trying to read the sport page of his home newspaper by the light of rockets bursting in air at one of those gorgeous fireworks exhibits at Versailles.

The marriage of the handsome artist Peter Arno will take out of circulation one of the town's most sought beaux.

Since his marriage to the vivacious Lois Long went on the rocks, Arno has been playing the field and his dinner companion choices ranged from the pick of the chorus beauties to the budingest of the debutantes. He was reported engaged to a different charmer almost every week.

A correspondent spikes the almost generally accepted story that Neysa McMein was born Moran and that her last name was a numerological selection. He declares she was the daughter of Harry McMein, capable night editor of the famous Quincy, Ill., Quiz, and that as a little girl she was known as Margie McMein.

On the other hand "Who's Who" lists the artist as McMein, Neysa (Moran); daughter of Harry Moran and Isabelle Lee (Parker) M. Miss McMein's husband, John Baragwanath, incidentally, has just finished a book on his experiences as an engineer in far places.

The best known eating place for the wise of Chinatown is a nameless, dingy cellar at 20½ Pell street. It can serve only 40 and makes no play for the slumming trade. The proprietor, a blinking unsmiling Chink with a high pitched vioce, is known as "Hello."

He was once part of Charlie Brown's establishment in Limehouse.

I dropped by the Doyers street Mission—once the old Chinese theater—where Tom Noonan so long salvaged an occasional lost soul from the sluggish wreckage that seeped into his meeting house. An intangible something seemed gone.

The congregation sang "Washed in the Blood of the Lamb" in the same cracked voice; but without the old fervor. The "lost sheep" still miss their shepherd. Noonan had been one of them, a plug ugly convict, drunkard and thief. He had the compassion that seems to come only to those who have plumbed the depths. It may be a long time before the Bowery finds another Bishop.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

PITY—THE BRASS KNUCKLES

We were talking about the savage contrivances used by thugs—brass knuckles, blackjacks, ether gags, etc.—and someone wondered which one was most brutal. A lazy silence—then a slender, grayish man with a twisted mouth said, half to himself—

"Pity—that's worse than any of them!"

Elsie Robinson

We looked at each other, startled. Queer remark! Then we began remembering his own story. Common enough story, but always tragic. As a young fellow he was shy—didn't go out much—but he had been making good in his quiet way.

Then, somehow or other, he met her—a pretty, helpless-looking little thing with one of those sob stories.

The usual thing—a more sophisticated man would have seen through it in a flash—family bankruptcy, old home lost, now she was "slaving her life away" at some miserable job.

THE TRAPPED MAN

No tougher break, probably, than thousands of girls face every day, but she made it sound like a Greek tragedy. And a gentle fellow like that was bound to fall of it.

So, before he'd fairly realized what was happening, he was married. And facing a daily hell.

For, of course, once she had him hooked, she played her line to the limit. Whined and wheezed twenty-four hours a day, crying him into doing anything she wanted.

He didn't have a minut eto himself. If he as much picked up a book or suggested going out with other men there was a squall.

Naturally, in time he got on to it and tried to break away a little—get a few rights himself, but every time he did she'd work the old pity racket harder than ever and—he'd weaken. One look at her white pinched face and he'd feel like a dog.

PITY THE WORST

So, little by little, he'd given up. Let his friends go—resigned from his clubs—passed up opportunities. So there he was—his life gone to pot for a creature who looked as fragile as Dresden china and was, actually, as ruthless as any man-killing shark.

And now he was summing it up in those slow, toneless words that, somehow, hit you harder than actual shrieks of agony:

"Pity—that's worse than any gangster weapon. It'll get you where brass knuckles could never reach—knock you out more completely than chloroform. For it scrambles your own judgment. You don't know yourself what you ought to do—and so you haven't any guard against it. The very decency in you leaves you open to it.

"What can a man do when a woman pulls a racket like that?" he was—we knew—really talking to himself. Excusing himself to his own embittered soul.

"He can't knock her down as he would a common stickup," she went on, "even though he knows she's in the same class. He just has to sit and take it.

"And, of course, she knows it, and she'll take advantage in ways you wouldn't imagine—spring the rottenest tricks! And get by with it because—Oh, hell!—because in spite of all his intelligence the man's always sorry for her!"

INTELLIGENCE REBELS

He stopped abruptly. But we knew he'd spoken for thousands of decent, desperate people as well as himself—fine people who had been actually blackjacked by pity into the most-appalling situations.

Not only by women, either. You might think that women were the worst pity racketeers, but they aren't. Men can be fully as ruthless an' unscupulous.

You'd be amazed if you knew how many generous women have been hounded into marriage by some worthless fellow's whine. Whine about what? Anything! Not understood at home. Or dirty deals at the office.

Or — this is the commonest — some Secret Sorrow. A fine, unselfish woman is almost helpless before a thing like that. Her intelligence usually rebels furiously—but her own mother instinct sells her out.

With men, I suspect, it's generally conceit. It tickles them to think of being A God to some helpless little thing. They flatter themselves, of course, that she's completely bewildered—needs their "calm, cool strength" to save her!

Then, before they know how they got there, they're saying "I DO!" And regretting it forever after!

Pity—the brass kunckles!

Lucky mortal, YOU, if you haven't taken the count beneath them!

The New War Crisis

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

No phase of the Italian-Ethiopian crisis has interested me more than has that of the pressure brought to bear by England to get this country into an active role in the dispute. All her diplomatic, political and press resources have been brought into play, with every gun turned on Washington.

Edwin C. Hill

Captain Anthony Eden, young and debonair, expresses the hope of American action. As the British spokesman in Geneva and at Paris he kept our diplomats and our newspapermen informed of what was going on.

Back in England, leaders in thought, from Viscount Snowden down, are issuing statements and writing letters to the press, calling upon America to stand with England in a united front against the agression of Italy.

SNOWDEN'S POINTS

Viscount Snowden makes these three points in a statement appealing for American intervention:

1—The covenant of the League of Nations makes an isolated dispute the business of all the signatories to these documents.

2—Unprovoked attack by one of the nations upon another member of the League compels the league to come ot the assistance of the jeopardized nation.

3—In the event of war, the League must, if it discharges its obligations, take military or economic sanctions against Italy.

All this, of course, is in August, 1935. It concerns a dispute between two powers in the League of Nations—Italy and Ethiopia.

The trouble is the outgrowth of a skirmish on the African frontier in which lives were lost on both sides.

Mussolini sends his armies down to the Italian colonies bordering on Ethiopia and waits only for the rain to stop to begin a conquest of the country.

Why? Because he wants satisfaction for a wrong; because he wants a potentially rich colony for Italy's population; because he wants a source of raw material and a market for Italian products, and because the Ethiopians are a backward race, slave traders and in need of white domination.

Doesn't it occur to the reader that somewhere, sometime in the very recent past, there was an international dispute almost exactly the same as this?

Wasn't the United States deeply involved almost to the point of a rupture of relations with another great power? Yes, such was the case.

All this was back in the early months of 1932. It concerned a dispute between Japan and China. A Japanese train was wrecked in Chinese territory. Who wrecked it, nobody knows. Japan began sending armies across to China.

Why? Because she wanted satisfaction for the wrong; because she wanted Manchuria, immensely rich in natural resources and an outlet for her population and her manufactured goods; because the Chinese were "backward" in government, did not maintain law and order and were in need of the domination of a forceful race.

THE BRITISH VIEW

The American Secretary of State at the time was Henry L. Stimson, a believer in treaties. He went to bat with Japan, condemned the bombing of Chinese towns, pointed out the provisions of the Kellogg-Briand non-aggession pacts and warned that the United States would refuse recognition of territorial gains made by the force of arms.

To the amazement of [illegible] son and to Americans [illegible] eral, who knew of [illegible] great stake in the East, [illegible] ing Street left our State [illegible] ment out on the limb.

"The stabilizing [illegible] panese overlordship [illegible] ria will be benefi[illegible] world." Such was [illegible] summing up of Br[illegible] opinion at the time.

The same Captain Eden, [illegible] Under Secretar[illegible] fairs, said as m[illegible] of Commons w[illegible] asked him if En[illegible] support Mr. Stims[illegible] nition stand.

Washington's Warning

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

AS the first session of the Seventy-Fourth Congress adjourns, these words of the Farewell Address of George Washington may well be "read, marked, learned and inwardly digested" by true Americans North, East, South and West.

This valedictory "the Father of his Country" bequeathed to his people on September 17, 1796. That was the ninth birthday of the Constitution of the United States, which had been adopted on September 17, 1787.

After declaring that "the basis of our political systems is the right of the people to make and alter their constitutions of government," George Washington said:

WASHINGTON'S WORDS

"Towards the preservation of your government, the permanency of your present happy state, it is requisite, not only that you steadily discountenance irregular oppositions to its acknowledged authority, but also that you resist with care the spirit of innovation upon its principles, however specious the pretexts.

"One method of assault may be to effect, in the forms of the Constitution, alterations which will impair the energy of the system, and thus to undermine what cannot be directly overthrown.

"In all the changes to which you may be invited, remember that time and habit are at least as necessary to fix the true character of governments as of other human institutions; that experience is the surest standard by which to test the real tendency of the existing constitution of a country; that facility in changes, upon the credit of mere hypothesis and opinion, exposes to perpetual change, from the endless variety of hypothesis and opinion."

Radicals in the Congress are already committed to a sapping expedition to undermine the Government of the Constitution.

The objective of these sappers—Reds, Pinks and Yellows alike—is, to use Washington's own words, to "impair [illegible] energy" of the American sy[illegible] to undermine w[illegible] directly overthro[illegible]

For example th[illegible] of Radicals in th[illegible] which will seek [illegible] and re-election u[illegible] that the Tenth Amendment [illegible] the Constitution, wh[illegible] to the several States th[illegible] not delegated to the [illegible] Government, shall be el[illegible] lified by a new amendm[illegible] repealed outright.

The effect of either change would be to destroy the rights of the States.

The sooner the Radicals in Congress carry their issue to the people the better it will be for the people. Now, as always, they can be trusted to choose between the advice and counsel of American patriots from George Washington to the present, and those Radicals who in the past, as in the present, "seek to undermine what cannot be directly overthrown."

In this fight to save the Government of the Constitution from the attacks of the sappers, Constitutional Democrats and Constitutional Republicans will hold the right of the line in the years ahead. And the issue now as in the past can be safely left to the "great jury of the people."

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

The Woman Trou Gavest

It seems almost as hard, these days, to mislay a husband as it is to get rid of a bad dime or a wrecked car. Somebody is always digging him up and pinning him on you.

Helen Howland

To a man kisses are like after-dinner speeches, always most interesting when they are impromptu, just long enough — and not too serious.

Sometimes a "good husband" is merely one who is too busy struggling to pay the bills his wife runs up to waste the time or energy it takes to be a sinner.

Judging from the number of beauty parlors, golf clubs and automobiles still running on high, woman's vanity and man's love of diversion have done more than anything else to keep money in circulation.

An attractive girl has to keep a diary, those summer [illegible] so that she can tell ju[illegible] man she promised to "love [illegible] ever," week before last.

The honeymoon is beginning to wane when the bridegroom begins to realize [illegible] easier it is to lo[illegible] when her father [illegible] her facials, per[illegible] hosiery.

And the honeymoo[illegible] when he reaches the [illegible] he would rather give [illegible] sized check or a new [illegible] bracelet than one of hi[illegible] day evenings.

Money is a greater m[illegible] love than poverty. Many [illegible] riage has withstood the under[illegible] of hard times, for years, [illegible] be all washed up on a wave of prosperity.

The first marriage used to be the last in a girl's life; now it appears to be only a preliminary experiment.

No matter how public-spirited a woman may be, a sunburned nose can make her forget all about economic conditions.
